MELLEN RE-INDICTED

INFERNAL MACHINES IN LONDON

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Suffragette violence reached a climax today when Premier Asquith and other members of the British Cabinet were solemnly warned to guard carefully against careless handling of packages mailed to them through the postoffice, for fear they might contain infernal machines.

This danger was revealed by the explosion of a number of glass tubes as they were taken from letter boxes by postmen. Investigation revealed that the tubes had been filled with an explosive acid. They had been addressed to Premier Asquith, Chancellor David Lloyd George and other Cabinet members.

If the women's plan had worked successfully the statesmen would have been blinded in open-eg packages. The women also mailed a number of letters, which on being exposed to the light burst into flames. These were evidently intended as firebrands to burn the homes of the ministers.

Such, apparently, were the surprises which the women had promised in their campaign of violence if the franchise bill were dropped by the government.

Asquith Is Hooted.

The suffragettes carried their guerilla warfare outside of London and into the provinces during the day. In a number of towns women poured acid into letter boxes, destroying all the mail therein.

At Dundee, Scotland, violence broke out when Premier Asquith started to make a speech explaining the government attitude toward electoral reforms. Fifty women, many of them from London, had entered the hall, taking seats well down in front. When the Premier arose the women began to scream "Traitor" and "Liar." The women were thrown bodily from the hall, but were not arrested. They returned time after time, being ejected each time they entered, but finally they became so exhausted that Asquith was allowed to go on with his speech without interruption.

Woman Prisoners Defiant.

Hearing of suffragette cases began at the Bow street police court as soon as court was opened. The first woman arraigned was charged with smashing a $750 plate glass window in the office of the Allan steamship line.

"Yes, I smashed it, and I would smash every window in London to get the vote," she cried, when the magistrate asked her if she had anything to say. She was held for trial at the Old Bailey Sessions.

The next woman was charged with breaking a window in the offices occupied by Lewis Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies. Harcourt is one of the most bitter anti-suffragists in the Cabinet.

The woman became so agitated from mingled rage and exultence that she could not articulate. She was sentenced to two weeks' imprisonment, with the option of paying a $5 fine.

One of the boldest suffragettes ever arrested by the police was taken in the toils this evening after she had attacked the residence of Archbishop of Canterbury, head of the Anglican Church, and smashed several windows. She admitted that she had planned to attack Buckingham palace, and if possible, get a personal interview with King George. Her confession resulted in orders being issued to allow no women within the grounds at Buckingham palace except those known to be anti-suffragists.

Men Attack Women's Union.

Mrs. Despard, who with Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, is the most militant of the leaders, appeared at the offices of the Women's Social and Political Union, some one who kept his name secret having paid her $10 the last night.

"I don't want liberty, but I'm glad to get back into the fight," exclaimed Mrs. Despard, who is a motherly looking woman of sixty-five. She then offered a reward of $25 to the woman who could think up some new plan of violence to harass the government.

So deep is the growing resentme-

Pope's Physician Persuades Pontiff to Take More Rest

ROME, Jan. 30.—Dr. Marchiafava, the Pope's physician, has persuaded the Pontiff to take an occasional rest, and hence the audiences are likely to be suspended for a couple of days each week. There was none yesterday. Dr. Marchiafava insists that the Pope shall not attend fatiguing functions during the Summer. He has also suggested that the anniversary of Pope Leo's death and the coronation of Pius X., which have heretofore been held in the Sistine Chapel on June 20 and July 9 shall be transferred to November 5 and November 16.

HAVERHILL GAS COMPANY FIGHTS STATE DECISION

A suit in equity was brought in the United States Court today by the Haverhill Gas Light Company against Forrest E. Barker, Morris Schaff and Alonzo B. Reed of the Massachusetts Gas and Electric Light Commission, and also against Attorney-General James M. Swift, in which the constitutional question as to the right of to the defendants to compel the plaintiff to reduce the price of gas to eighty cents per thousand. The company is now charging eighty-five, and it claims that a fair price should not be less than ninety-five cents. An injunction is sought against the order of the commission, which went into effect yesterday. The suit is returnable in March

BILL REQUIRES LISTING OF STOCKS GIVEN FOR LOANS

Seeking legislation to require stock brokers and others to keep certain records designed to render examination of banks more effective, a bill was introduced in the House of Representatives today accompanying the petition of William E. Hingston.

The bill provides, in brief, that all stock brokers, dealers and traders in securities of any description shall keep, in proper books of account, memoranda of all securities whereon they have obtained loans from any national or savings bank, or like institution receiving deposits. The bank examiner is to have access at all reasonable times to books and memoranda required.

1,000,000 CUBIC YARDS OF EARTH IN SLIDE AT CULEBRA

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A gigantic slide in the Culebra cut of the Panama Canal took place on Monday night, according to a report received today.

The report says that more than 1,000,000 additional cubic yards of earth will have to be removed from the cut as a result of the slide, which buried a train of cars, two steam shovels and a large amount of railroad apparatus. No one was hurt.

REPUBLICANS WILL KEEP HEADQUARTERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Republican headquarters will be established in Washington in charge of James B. Reynolds, secretary of the Republican National Committee, and will be maintained for the first few months of the Democratic administration if not permanently. Mr. Reynolds today conferred with Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the National Committee, and the decision was reached to open headquarters. A location has not yet been fixed upon.

GERMAN CABINET ON VERGE OF DOWNFALL

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—The German Cabinet is in danger of a downfall. The Reichstag today passed by 213 to 97, a vote of distrust against the government after Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg had proposed the Germanization of Poles in Germany by compelling them to purchase the property in which they reside.

SAYS BOSTON HAS BEST MILK SUPPLY

Dr. C. E. North, a New York sanatarian, speaking before the Joint Committee on Agriculture and the joint Committee on Public Health in room No. 249, State House, today said that "Boston has the best milk supply of any city of its size in the country." He was discussing the milk problem in general.

TUDOR TEA

No Tea has ever pleased so many people. It is fragrant and wholesome. Buy it today.

TEACHERS FAINT AT HEARING

Several women school teachers fainted and had to be carried into the corridor to be revived today at the hearing held in Room No. 446, State House, during a discussion of several petitions asking that pupils of the Normal School, Normal Art School and Lowell Normal School be included in the proposed law providing for half fare transportation of students on railroads in the State. The hearing was held before the committee on railroads.

The hearing room became overcrowded, but still men and women forced their way into the room. They rowed packed itself into the room until there was hardly breathing spaceleft. Then women began to faint.

The women who fainted were teachers in several of the schools represented and attended the committee hearing in charge of 400 pupils. The room was so crowded that excitement was caused in clearing a passageway to get the women out.

Excludes Normal School.

Two bills were before the committee providing for half fare for normal school pupils as well as students of other schools. The present law extends the half fares to pupils of other schools, but not the normal school.

The room was so crowded that it was necessary for a great many of the pupils and others interested in the legislation to stand out in the corridor and on the stairway.

Representative William J. Napheu of Natick, father of one of the bills, was the first speaker. He said:

I know of cases where some students have been compelled to leave school on account of the cost of transportation. These half tickets should not be limited to pupils of any school. In education rests the destiny of the nation. Encourage, don't discourage it!

Every young man or woman who is trying to secure an education in this State should receive the same privileges from the State.

Accuse Railroad Board.

The Railroad Commission was accused of being "unduly friendly to the railroad corporations," and its recommendation, which went into effect January 1, abolishing the three-months' commuters' tickets and providing for an "equalization" of railroad rates, was warmly scored at another hearing before the committee today. The service on the New Haven also came in for criticism.

More than a score of representatives of various towns in the State declared that their rates have been increased by the new rates established by the Railroad Commission.

The hearing which preceded the student rate hearing was held in Room 446, one of the largest committee rooms in the State House. The room was crowded with men and women, the great majority of whom indicated their disapproval of the new rates by applauding the speakers who "the commission and its recommendation.

Bills Before Committee.

Two bills dealing with the rate system were before the committee. One, on petition of Representative William J. Napheu of Natick, provided for the restoration of the old rates, including the three months' ticket. The second, on petition of Senator Frederick H. Hilton of Framingham, providing that the monthly tickets sold by the railroads shall contain fifty-four instead of sixty tickets, and that the charge therefor shall be not more than nine-tenths of the charge now made for sixty tickets.

Representative Clarence A. Barnes of Mansfield, who advocated the restoration of the old system, or else the passage of the Hilton bill, made a severe attack on the New Haven Railroad. He said:

I appreciate deeply the friendship of the Railroad Commission towards the big railroad corporations and I suggest that if any of the members of the commission are out of a job in the future they would make very satisfactory additions to the directorate of the railroads

Ridicules Board's Claim.

He ridiculed the claim of the Railroad Commission that its new rate system helps the poor man because it does away with the three months ticket which the commission claimed the poor man could not afford to buy. He declared that under the new system the average commuter has to pay more for his transportation than before the

Bryan Accepts Chief Post in Cabinet of President Wilson

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30.—Conferences between William J. Bryan and other prominent Democratic leaders, including Henry E. Alexander of Trenton, N. J., a close personal friend of President-elect Wilson, resulted in the announcement that Mr. Bryan had given a positive assurance that he would accept the portfolio of Secretary of State in the Wilson Cabinet.

Mr. Alexander left early today for Trenton, and he is believed to be the bearer of Mr. Bryan's answer to Mr. Wilson.

Mr. Bryan will, it is said, remain at his Winter home here until the last of February, when he will leave for Washington, to attend the inauguration ceremonies.

SAYS WILSON CALLED OFF BALL BECAUSE HE FEARED MILITANTS

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—That Governor Wilson called off the inaugural reception because he was afraid the suffragists might make an embarrassing demonstration, was the accusation made today by Maude Malone.

"He did it, I believe, because he was afraid of what the suffragists might do," she said. "I'd like to make him more afraid. I'd like to put him in such a frame of mind that he'd keep himself surrounded by guards as the cabinet ministers do in England. The National Woman's Suffrage Association is making a great mistake not to concentrate on Wilson. Make him say 'Yes' or 'No' to the question of votes for women."

Miss Malone is the suffragist who tried to heckle the Governor during a campaign rally in Brooklyn and was arrested.

LOWELL FOLKS STOP FIRE AUTO PURCHASE

Although four of the five commissioners of the city of Lowell bought an automobile for $5,25 and voted to pay the money, George H. Brown, the fifth commissioner, today held up the purchase by applying, with twelve others, for an injunction in Superior Court at East Cambridge.

Brown's objecting to the transaction because, he says, the purchase of all supplies should be made by the purchasing agent and advertised. In this case they were not.

$581,000,000 TRADE EXPORT BALANCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—When it published casting up the accounts of the nation for 1912, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce today found that the world trade account showed a total of $581,000,000 on the right side. This was the value of goods sold abroad in excess of those brought into the United States. In the year the imports were in round numbers $1,518,000,000, while the exports amounted to $2,099,000,000.

CONFERENCE OVER WATERFRONT STRIKE

The strained relations between the union longshoremen and the agents of the transatlantic steamship lines and the master stevedores of the port of Boston continue, and the dispute over a new wage scale is apparently no nearer a settlement than it was six weeks ago. The agents and master stevedores held a conference at the Chamber of Commerce building today to discuss the situation, but when the conference was broken up they refused to discuss the matter.

DECIDE PIPE LINES COMMON CARRIERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—After a careful investigation of petitions presented by the various oil pipe line companies, the Interstate Commerce Commission today reiterated its former decision declaring them common carriers.

FITZHUGH OUT OF THE G. T. ROAD

Earl H. Fitzhugh resigned today as president of all the Grand Trunk's Railroad Company's New England lines and was succeeded by E. J. Chamberlin, president of the Grand Trunk Railroad.

President Fitzhugh placed his resignation before the boards of directors of the Southern New England Railroad Company of Rhode Island, the Southern New England Railroad Corporation of Massachusetts and the Central Vermont Transportation Company at the meeting of Grand Trunk officials at the Hotel Touraine today and it was immediately accepted.

President Chamberlin, who was elected to head the Grand Trunk following the death of President Hays, who was a victim of the Titanic, was elected president of the various corporations in place of Mr. Fitzhugh. Former Governor E. C. Smith of Vermont was elected to succeed Mr. Fitzhugh as a member of the boards of directors of these companies. Mr. Smith is a former president of the Vermont Central Railroad.

Chamberlin Was Indicted.

Mr. Fitzhugh was placed in charge of the building of the Grand Trunk into Boston and Providence, at the direction of President Hays, who was enthusiastically in favor of this project. When Mr. Chamberlin took Mr. Hays' place the building of the Grand Trunk into New England was given up. The passing of Mr. Fitzhugh from Grand Trunk affairs was forecasted, as it was known that he and Mr. Chamberlin disagreed over the giving up the project. Mr. Fitzhugh being in favor of the project.

The Federal Grand Jury in New York investigated the giving up of the project and indicted President Mellen of the New Haven, Chairman Smithers of the Grand Trunk Board of Directors, and President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk on conspiracy charges.

President Chamberlin Present.

Here are the men who attended the conference:

E. J. Chamberlin, president of the Grand Trunk Railroad and president of the Central Vermont Railroad.

Former Governor E. C. Smith of Vermont.

Cy Warman, of the Grand Trunk.

E. H. Fitzhugh, former president of the Central Vermont and formerly vice president of the Grand Trunk.

Judge Kenrick, of the Grand Trunk legal forces.

Lawyer J. W. Remick, of Concord, N. H.

Lawyer John S. Mordock, of Providence.

C. W. Witters, vice-president of the Central Vermont, of St. Albans, Vt.

W. H. Chaffee, treasurer of the Central Vermont, of St. Albans, Vt.

Howard G. Kelly, vice-president of the Grand Trunk and consulting engineer of the Southern New England.

Fitzhugh's Case Considered.

Mr. Chamberlin, Mr. Jones and Mr. Warman came over from New York, reaching Boston today. Mr. Fitzhugh came to Boston yesterday. Others attending the conference came here today. This is what Mr. Warman said about the meeting:

When this conference was called there was no specific question made as to just what would be taken up. Generally speaking, the meeting is the result of the resignation of Mr. Fitzhugh as president of the Central Vermont and the filling of Mr. Chamberlin in that position on January 23. There are a number of matters in connection with this change of officials that needed clear ng up.

No doubt the Southern New England situation will be taken up and be threshed out. But I don't know what will be done.

It was estimated that $5,000,000 was needed to complete the Southern New England line to Providence. Underwood and E. A. Probst, superintendent of engineers of the proposed line, have engaged permanent quarters for the railroad in Webster, and the merchants there have been given to understand that work will soon be resumed.

MRS. CLEVELAND KEEPS PLANS QUIET

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 30.—Mrs Grover Cleveland is keeping very quiet the plans concerning her wedding to Professor Thomas J. Preston, Jr. When asked today if the date had been set she replied that she did not care to say anything on this subject at present.

THE HATS OF GREAT MEN

Wilson Sadly Says: 'Yes, Suppose I Must Wear a Stovepipe Hat'

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 30.—President-elect Wilson will depart from his usual custom in the matter of dress and will wear a silk hat when he reviews the inaugural parade in Washington.

"Yes, I guess I'll have to wear a stovepipe hat at the inaugural ceremonies," said Mr. Williams, sorrowfully. "I suppose I must concede that much to custom."

The last time the governor wore a silk hat was two years ago, when he reviewed the militia, upon which occasion he said "he never felt more like an ass in his life."

JOKE UNDERWOOD BECAUSE HIS HAT CAME FROM ITALY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Majority Leader Underwood was the butt of much hilarity today as the result of the disclosure at the tariff hearing that he was partial to headgear made in Italy.

Mr. Underwood had produced his brown felt hat to discover from a witness about what was its cost of manufacture abroad.

Republican members of the committee twitted him for failure to patronize home industry. Mr. Underwood received the pleasantries with his usual imperturbability.

When one of his Republican colleagues intimated that an inventory of Mr. Underwood's wardrobe might disclose the presence of English washing suits and French hosiery and gloves, the majority leader's smile only broadened. He refused to be agitated.

Detain South End Woman Who Wrote Scurrilous Notes

Detained at the State Hospital for the Insane is a middle-aged woman whom the police claim has been writing scurrilous letters to Mayor Fitzgerald and other public officials. The matter was called to the attention of Chief Inspector McCarr.

Inspector Lynch, acting with the postoffice authorities, traced the writer as one residing in the South End, and by shrewd detective work learned that she lived on Corning street, off Shawmut avenue. She is about fifty years old and has been employed in a Tremont row restaurant. Questioned by the police, she declared that she had no grievance against those whom she had written nor had she made any threats. She claimed that she had been defrauded out of considerable property by her relatives and was anxious for notoriety.

She was removed to the Fernwood Road Hospital and after examination by alienists will probably be committed to the State Insane Hospital.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 200,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

CITY MUST PAY FOR TUNNEL ELEVATORS.

The city of Boston must pay $51,312, with interest from 1906, to the Boston Elevated for the installation of the elevators and machinery in the Atlantic avenue station of the East Boston tunnel. The city of Boston sued the Elevated to fix the cost.

PORTLAND GETS FALL RIVER FRANCHISE.

AUBURN, N. Y., Jan. 30.—Secretary Farrell of the National Association of professional baseball clubs, today announced that the name of the Connecticut League had been changed to the Eastern League, and that Fall River franchise in the New England League has gone to Portland.

BAR WOMEN FROM WIRELESS POSTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—More than fifty women have passed examinations here as wireless operators, but their appointment to responsible positions has been held up in the belief that men would be more depended upon in a crisis.

$30,000,000 DAMAGE DONE TO CITRUS CROP

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30.—Thirty million dollars is the estimate of the damage done to citrus fruit—oranges, lemons, grape fruit, etc.—in the recent cold wave in this State.

FOUR DEAD IN HOTEL BLAZE AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—A woman and three men lost their lives today in a fire that partly destroyed the Iowa Hotel in North Clark street, near the Chicago River. A number of lodgers in the place were injured, many fled in their nightclothes and some were rescued by firemen.

new system went into effect. He said further:

The equalization, so-called, seems to have been made on an upward grade. The lower rates were brought up to the high ones instead of the high ones being brought down.

We have protested to the Railroad Commission, but it is useless to protest to the commission when their recommendations, to which the protests are made, are favorable to the railroads.

Representative William J. Naphen of Natick said that the monthly sixty-ride tickets have affected 400 commuters in Natick alone and to the amount of $5,000 a year. He said:

"There was nothing in the recommendation of the Railroad Commission which suggested the discontinuance of the three months' ticket. This talk of equalization is ridiculous. Tickets to Natick cost twice as much under the new system as to Wellesley, though the distance is but two miles and a half further.

Tells of Old System.

Senator Dillon brought out that while under the old system the three months' ticket contained 162 rides, or fifty-four per month, the one-month ticket now issued contains sixty rides, meaning an added cost of a tax upon the commuter per month. He declared that but very few of the commuters from the out-of-town sections of the State had occasion to use sixty rides a month because they did not travel on Sundays or holidays, and, accordingly, even with only fifty-four tickets in a monthly book, there were always some left over at the end of the month for which the railroad company gets paid.

Edward Carr of Hopkinton, who said he represented about seventy commuters, declared that before the commission put its new recommendation into effect, he had written twice asking for a hearing, and once time he received an evasive answer, but no hearing was granted him.

against the women that a number of men whose property has been damaged by the suffragettes attacked the headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union. They were driven away by the police.

Undismayed by this last sentence imposed, a number of suffragettes followed Premier Asquith to Leven, in Fifeshire, last night, and continued their militant tactics outside of a hall in which the Premier was addressing his constituents. A strong cordon of constables was drawn around the hall, and against this the "hushhaboukesses," as the militant suffragettes have come to be called, dashed wildly, but in vain. One of them was prepared against repulse. She had papers containing red pepper, which she blew into the faces of the officers who opposed her. She was arrested.

The situation is so tense that the suffragettes are beginning to fall out with their friends. They broke up the annual meeting of the Labor party yesterday in London. This organization has been siding with the women, and a flood of interruptions occurred while George Henry Roberts, member of Parliament from Norwich, was addressing the meeting. The women wanted to know what the party was going to do about votes for women and why the present Ministry had not been turned out. Interrupters were ejected from the meeting.

The cost of insurance on plate-glass has not yet been raised, but the companies now sitting in London, adopted a resolution instructing the Lisbon members of Parliament to oppose any franchise bill in which women shall not be included.

100 SUFFRAGISTS WILL START MARCH TO NATION'S CAPITOL

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Suffragists here were elated today over the announcement from many cities along the line of the New York to Washington march, which starts February 12, that large bands of advocates of the "cause" were being organized and would fall in line as the pilgrimage wended its way through the different cities.

Colonel Rosalie Gardner Jones, who led the successful New York to Albany march and who will command the parade to the Capitol, looked herself today in writing printed instructions for all those who want to join the parade, telling them how to avoid tired, aching, swollen feet during the 250-mile hike, and also how to guard their general health.

WM. P. FOWLER, NEW CHAIRMAN OF LICENSING BOARD

WILLIAM P. FOWLER

FOWLER WILL TAKE $5,500 ON LICENSE BOARD

It was taken for granted all over Boston today that the nomination of William P. Fowler for Chairman Hudson's place on the Licensing Board for the City of Boston was Governor Foss' method of notifying Democratic leaders and Democratic workers that the Governor had enough, and at the end of the year will retire to private life.

William P. Fowler is a Republican. There is already one Republican on the Board—an exceedingly good Republican—in the person of Fred A. Emery. The Governor, therefore, has turned the Licensing Board over to the Republicans. What the average Democratic worker has to say of this performance is plain, vigorous and scorching.

"There can be no party success," said one of the leaders said today, "without organization. There can be no organization without workers. And workers will be scarcer than hens' teeth if the reward for party service is the appointment to office of men from the opposition party. This appointment means that Foss is done."

Mr. Fowler's Statement.

In an interview today Mr. Fowler said he knew nothing about the duties of a member of the Licensing Board, but that he was looking into the matter.

Mr. Fowler for eleven years was registrar of the institutions department, with a salary of $3,000 a year, but he has declined to draw it, handing the city the sum of $33,000. His salary as chairman of the Licensing Board is $5,000 a year. This is Mr. Fowler's statement:

I am not yet a member of the Boston Licensing Board. The Governor's appointment must have the confirmation of the Council before I become a commissioner. So, you see, it would hardly be the thing for me to say anything about conditions that may exist on licensed premises in Boston. As a matter of fact, I know nothing about them, and so I will have nothing to say.

I don't know what the law is governing the duties which the Governor has called upon me to help perform.

You see, I am just going over the law now (pointing to the pile of law books on his desk). So I cannot say what I may try to do in office until I am there to do it, and I don't want to talk about conditions when I know nothing whatever about them.

If I am confirmed by the Council, and when I have an opportunity to study conditions, I'll be pleased to talk; until then I will not discuss anything connected with the Boston Licensing Board.

If I am confirmed as a member of the Licensing Board I shall accept the salary of the position.

The Salary Question.

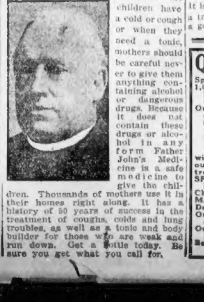
Fowler's explanation of his refusal to draw his salary for eleven years was this:

I do not think that I earn the salary. Most of the work is done by clerks. There is hardly a day, however, that I do not devote some time to my duties as registrar, some days it requires considerable time, while on others there is very little to do.

I do not need the money, and the work is on matters in which I am interested, so that I have always been glad to give the city the benefit of my services without pay.

Mr. Fowler is a Republican. The records of the Election Commissioners' office show that under the old law he was enrolled as a Republican and under the new law was enrolled as a Republican and has not changed the enrollment, although there was a report that he had recently enrolled as a Democrat. On April 30 at the presidential primaries Mr. Fowler took a Republican ballot, and voted it, thus again enrolling himself as a Republican.

A SAFE MEDICINE FOR THE CHILDREN



When the children have a cold or cough or when they need a tonic, mothers should be careful never to give them anything containing alcohol or dangerous drugs. Because it does contain these drugs or alcohol in any form Father John's Medicine is a safe medicine to give the children. Thousands of mothers use it in their homes right along. It has a history of 50 years of success in the treatment of coughs, colds and lung troubles, as well as a tonic and body builder for those who are weak and run down. Get a bottle today. Be sure you get what you call for.

GEORGE WHITE FIRST AS TAX PAYER; $74,974

George R. White of No. 295 Commonwealth avenue, president of the Potter Drug & Chemical Company, is the largest individual taxpayer in the city of Boston, his tax for 1912 amounting to $74,974, with a valuation of $993,500, real estate, and $500,000 personal. Governor Foss is fourth on the list.

The tax figures compiled by the assessors today show that fourteen corporations and twelve individuals pay a trifle more than one-eleventh of the total of $24,706,690.60 in taxes, which was levied in 1912.

Of the total figures, the fourteen corporations pay into the city treasury $2,-561,888.64; the twelve individuals referred to contribute as their share $384,280.72.

The Boston & Albany Railroad Company pays the largest corporation tax, which amounts to $322,653.60, this being on a total valuation of $10,617,000 on real estate and $27,000 on personal property.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company, which ranks as the second of the big corporations, pays the big personal tax, $305,272.88, this being based on an assessment of $12,250,000, levied chiefly on the machinery, etc., used in the operation of its plant. The tax on its personal property is $750,000 in excess of amount in 1911.

Foss is Fourth.

The third largest individual taxpayer is Mrs. Isabel Anderson, wife of Larz Anderson, U. S. Minister to Japan. Governor Foss this year rates as the fourth largest individual taxpayer, instead of third a year ago. He pays a tax of $354,052.88, being the amount levied on $1,562,200 on real estate and $600,000 on personal property.

The name of Washington B. Thomas, who was on the list of largest taxpayers last year, dropped from the list of this year because of disposing of some of his property and transferring much of the rest into trusts.

The total amount of the taxes paid by both the largest corporations and individuals will be found in the following tables:

Corporation Taxes.

$40,000 CONTEST

GOOD FOR 5 VOTES

VALUELESS AFTER Thursday, Feb. 13.

Name . . . .

Street and No. . . . .

City or Town . . . . Dist. . . . .

Votes will be given for subscriptions, separate from 25-vote coupons. Write plainly on stamp or outside wrapper candidate's name, address and district number, and total number of votes sent in each package. Write or stamp only 1 or 4 coupons in each bundle. If possible, candidates should use rubber stamp with name, address and district number.

GREAT $40,000 CONTEST ENDS IN FOUR WEEKS

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Four weeks from tomorrow!

The AMERICAN'S great $40,000 contest comes to a close on Friday, February 28—only four weeks away.

The special vote basis now in force on subscriptions has resulted in greater subscription-getting speed on the part of most of the candidates. It is too good an offer to overlook.

Until Saturday at 10 p. m. winds up the special bonus offer. The Contest Headquarters at No. 5 Winthrop square will be open until 10 p. m. on Saturday to receive subscriptions on account of this special offer.

The next and final vote list before the contest closes will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN on February 9—one week from next Sunday. The polls will close for this final standing on next Monday, February 3, at 5:30 p. m., and will include all subscriptions and coupon votes received in the hands of the Contest Editor at that hour on that day. Mail matter received after 5:30 p. m. February 3 will not be included.

The Contest Editor in auxiliary to get reports from candidates whose subscribers are not receiving the Sunday AMERICAN regularly. But it is well to be certain that subscriber is not receiving paper before reporting, as, in many instances, investigation shows that subscribers state delivery is being properly made and are at a loss to understand where reports originated. Bring or send in a memoranda of any cases of poor or non-delivery and they will be given prompt attention. But first be certain that your facts are correct.

Candidates occasionally ask: "Can subscriptions be extended? For instance, I sent in a subscription for John Brown for six months a few weeks ago. Now I would like to extend Mr. Brown's subscription to the 30 months' term. Can I do so and get the extended term credit?"

The answer to that is "No!" Subscriptions once sent in cannot be extended. They cannot be changed in any way, once they are sent in, accepted, recorded and given the proper vote credit.

Subscriptions must stand in their original form. This ruling is made simply for the protection of all candidates, as it is perfectly apparent that, so far as the AMERICAN is concerned, the long-term subscriptions are most acceptable.

Make it a point to be at Contest Headquarters some time before 10 o'clock next Saturday night and bring in every last subscription that it is possible for you to rake and scrape together before then. The special bonus vote value will help wonderfully, you know, when the $40,000 is being awarded four weeks from tomorrow.

WAY CLEARED FOR BILL TO END CHILD LABOR

The Sullivan resolve providing for a State investigation of child labor, with a view towards ascertaining what kind of legislation is necessary to wipe out the evils of child labor, was passed by the AMERICAN, is now in the hands of the State printer. As soon as the resolve is in printed form, it will come up in the State Senate on the question of concurrence with the action of the House of Representatives in suspending the rules to admit it for consideration this year. No opposition in the Senate to the admission of the resolve has appeared as yet.

This information explains the failure of the measure to come up before the Senate yesterday, as was expected. The importance of the proposition prompted President Greenwood of the Senate to have the resolve printed for the information of the Senators. Ordinarily, a petition for new legislation coming up for admission under suspension of the rules is admitted before it is ordered printed. In this case, however, because of its importance, President Greenwood decided to have it printed first.

The reference of the resolve to the State printer was construed by friends of the measure today to indicate that the Senate will admit the measure. They base this belief on the contention that President Greenwood would not have obliged the State to undergo the expense of having the document printed if he had any knowledge of opposition to its consideration.

Friends Stand Ready.

A four-fifths vote is necessary in the Senate to suspend the rules in order that the measure may be considered by the present Legislature. The House of Representatives has already suspended this rule by a unanimous vote, following a public hearing by the House Rules Committee. The Rules Committee unanimously recommended suspension of the rules. At the public hearing which it gave on the matter, more than a score of prominent members of both legislative branches and a number of private citizens appeared to urge that an investigation into child labor conditions in the State be authorized.

In case an eleventh-hour opposition arises in the Senate, there are a number of prominent and influential Senators who stand ready to fight for the measure. Among them are Senators Charles F. McCarthy of Marlboro, Francis J. Horgan of Dorchester, Dennis E. Haley of Lawrence, Francis X. Quigley of Holyoke, Samuel Ross of New Bedford, Desmond Fitzgerald of Boston, James J. Brennan of Charlestown, Edward L. R. Bagley of East Boston, Thomas Joyce of Boston and William P. Hickey of Boston.

Since the favorable action of the House on the measure on Tuesday, hundreds of letters have been received in the AMERICAN office from citizens from all parts of the Commonwealth praising that action and endorsing the AMERICAN'S campaign against the evils of child labor. Especial praise is given to such prominent members of the House of Representatives John F. Meaney of Blackstone, Michael J. McEnroe of Boston, John C. Sanborn of Lawrence, Benjamin F. Hamlen of Medford, Speaker Cushing, Representative Channing Cox of Boston, John F. McCarthy of Lawrence, Thomas J. Gibbs of East Boston, Michael J. Brophy of East Boston, John A. Murphy of South Boston, P. Joseph Mc-Manus of Boston, Patrick B. Carr of Charlestown, Thomas J. Casey of Boston, Lewis E. Sullivan of Worcester and Edward E. McGrath of Boston.

Plans for Inquiry.

These men have all taken a prominent part in the fight for the resolve from the very beginning.

The resolve, which was introduced by Representative Benjamin F. Sullivan of East Boston, provides for the appointment of a special commission by the Governor, to investigate child labor conditions in the State, especially with a view of determining whether the fifty-four-hour law for children employed in manufacturing and mercantile establishments in the State is being evaded, and, if so, in what manner. The commission is called to report to the next Legislature not later than the second Wednesday in January with recommendations for legislation.

We Are Going to Have Bigger Heads and Drop Some Teeth and Ribs

PARIS, Jan. 30.—The man of the future, according to A. F. Ledouble, Professor of Medicine at Tours, will have a larger head, fewer teeth and shorter arms and less ribs than the man of today, and will compare with him unfavorably in stature.

The upper part of the head will be strongly developed. Owing to the fact that our food becomes increasingly easy to mastificate, the number of teeth will be reduced.

Among the primitive races in Australasia, it is not uncommon to find natives with thirty-six teeth, but the white man of tomorrow will be lucky if he has twenty-eight.

There is a tendency, says Professor Ledouble, for the first, eleventh and twelfth ribs to disappear.

$20 a Minute Cost to Government of Steel Trust Trial

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—About $6,000 per day is the cost to the government of its hearings in the Steel Trust dissolution suit. This includes pay of special attorneys; hire of stenographers and clerks; printing; minutes, railroad fares of witnesses and rental of rooms.

As the hearings on the average continue five hours a day this forms an outlay of $1,200 an hour, or $20 a minute. They begin last May and there have been sessions on fifty days, making an outlay to date of $300,000.

To complete the investigation it is estimated will require at least twenty-five more days. This will bring the total cost to the government up to $450,000.

Now: If You Buy a Pig, Do You Get All the Pig? That's Judge's Problem

CHICAGO, Jan. 30.—Two butchers are angry and two customers are seeking redress for alleged short weight purchases in the form of three pigs which they bought of the butchers, and Judge Sabath is in a quandary.

The court is wondering whether a man who buys a pig, paying a fixed price for the full weight, is being given short weight when the pig, which weighs less after the dressing process, is delivered to him. A case of that kind was adjourned by the judge to give him time to consult the law.

$12,000,000 of Our Uncle Sam's Cash for Training Wives

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A bill passed by the Senate is intended, partly in encouragement, to educate young women to become good housewives. The bill, which was a substitute for the Lever measure, carries $12,000,000 for distribution among agricultural and vocational schools in the States which are now receiving federal aid.

The bill provides for the teaching of "home economics" in the vocational schools. It passed by a vote of 51 to 30.

MORE DIVORCES IN NEW ENGLAND; 1 TO EACH 12 MARRIAGES

That the proportion of divorce to marriage is steadily increasing was brought out at the annual meeting at the Diocesan House of the National League for the Protection of the Family.

Rev. Dr. Samuel W. Dike, corresponding secretary, showed from figures that there was one divorce to every twelve marriages here. The following table of figures was given for New England:

	Marriages.	Divorces
1907	99,617	4,717
1908	99,407	4,707
1909	100,110	4,910
1910	99,584	4,824
1911	99,974	5,224

JOLLY MOLLY, 'WINKING GIRL,' SEEKS DIVORCE

Mrs. Molly Davis Weinstein, the original of the "Winking Girl" postcard, whose elopement and marriage to Harry Weinstein six years ago was considered one of the prettiest romances the West End had known, told another story to Judge Dubois in Suffolk Divorce Court today—a pitiful story of cruelty, abuse, starvation and neglect.

The winsome "Winking Molly" of fifteen years, plump, rosy-cheeked and bright-eyed, is now a victim of shameful treatment, according to her testimony to Judge Dubuque. She is the mother of two little girls and says that, with them, she has suffered much. She brought into court a half-dozen girl friends from the West End to corroborate her story. Weinstein is contesting the suit.

With sobs and tears Mrs. Weinstein made these accusations against her young husband:

She financed their honeymoon with $50 she had saved from her wages of $4.50 a week.

He beat her cruelly.

They starved at times.

When her first baby was born he was in jail for contempt of court.

She had to go to her sister for bread, also to neighbors.

They were evicted for non-payment of rent.

The family needed shoes and clothing.

He refused to work, but played pool all the time.

He punched and kicked her.

Six years ago Molly Davis lived at No. 21 Billerica street and worked in a West End postcard store. Friends used to apply to her this bit of popular song:

"Molly, Molly, always so jolly,
Always so happy, laughing and gay."

They would chirp this to the air of "Mollie and I and the Baby." Then Molly Davis would wink roguishly. Her wink was a wonder for saucy charm. Finally she was photographed winking and the picture was made into a postcard. There was a device on the card by which, when one pulled a string, the winking eye would wink. Naturally this postcard was "it plot," as stage people say.

About this time Harry Weinstein came along, according to the West End story, and the next known "Winking Molly" was a wife and married. What followed was told by Mrs. Weinstein today to Judge Dubuque as follows:

I was married in October, 1906, when I was fifteen years of age. I eloped to Providence with Harry Weinstein and was married there. He was a clerk in a law office then. I had saved $50 from my wages of $4.50 a week. When we went to Providence I gave it to my husband. He paid all the bills with this money. We went to New York and he worked on a street car for two days. Then we returned to Boston. My father swore out a warrant against him for abduction, but the case was not prosecuted. We started housekeeping.

Don't Blame the Drunkard

He's More to Be Pitied Than Blamed—How to Help Him

No one better than the victim himself knows the strength of the chains that hold him in bondage. Pity him. Help him. Don't kick him with ridicule and discourage him. He can be rescued without knowing what cured him.

Just to show what you can do for him, take the case of Mrs. L. A. Woods, a real estate agent in Dade City, Florida, whose cook—a girl 20 years old—kept drinking Red Ribbon tea, mixed with cream. Mrs. Woods gave her one dose of Red Ribbon in a glass of soda. The poor girl didn't know she was taking Remedy, but hasn't had the slightest desire for liquor since.

If you know anyone who ought to quit drinking, you have a duty to perform: give him Remedy; just go to Riker-Jaynes' for a package and put a little of it in his tea or coffee; he won't suspect it at all, because it's tasteless and guaranteed absolutely harmless.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a whole package, write in confidence to the Remedy Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Remedy does for victims of intemperance.

LAWSON'S NEW BULL PUP COSTS $500

BEETLES DESTROYED 8 MILLION TREES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—As a result of experiments carried out under the direction of the Department of Agriculture a method of combating the ravages of the mountain pine beetle has been found, according to a departmental report issued today. The experiments were undertaken in Northeastern Oregon, where beetles had worked havoc over more than one million acres of valuable timber land.

HULL SEES FLOCK OF GEESE FLYING NORTH

A flock of seventeen geese was seen flying over Hull, northeast bound, which, the sportsmen say, is unusual at this time of the year. This is not the only indication of an open Winter. The fishermen have been spearing eels and catching flounders on the shoal.

SALAZAR OPENS NEW REBELLION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—General Ignacio Salazar, formerly chief of staff under General Orozco, has been elected to lead a new revolution in northern Mexico, and now is rushing his men toward Juarez with the idea of overwhelming the forces before any federal reinforcements can reach there, according to War Department dispatches today.

MORE WORKING GIRLS TELL HOW THEY LIVE ON $8 A WEEKLY INCOME

What is the "low limit," as economists say, of the living wage for a girl?

Can a Boston working girl support herself respectably on eight dollars a week?

The AMERICAN is receiving letters every day on that practical subject, ever since the question was raised. The discussion arose through nursing from Philadelphia that no girl should come there to begin work on less than $8 a week.

Boston girls are writing about the weekly wage question in all its phases. They give their weekly outside of expense, so much for lodgings, so much for meals, so much for other necessaries.

Luxuries are not discussed to any great extent for the reason, it hardly needs to be stated, that on eight-dollar-a-week girl knows no luxuries.

Perusal of these letters is a liberal education in social science. It teaches truthfully because the writers describe their own experiences.

Latest letters from the working girl writers include the following:

Good Management Pays.

Editor AMERICAN:

Can a girl live on $8 a week? It depends largely on the girl. I dress well, dressed well, and was happy for six years on that amount. I had two unfurnished rooms in Roxbury, a kitchenette and cold water, furnace heat, furnished by the family, and gas. I paid $8 a month the year round. Sixty cents car fare.

By using a two-burner oil stove with a small oven I cooked my meals. I did not find this a hardship or take as much time in going out to eat. I would put the water on for coffee and the steak or eggs on just as soon as I arose and it would be ready when I was dressed. I would place the dishes in the sink to be washed with the supper dishes.

I did my own washing, which can be very easily done by using a naphtha soap and soaking.

A good sewing machine can be purchased, second-hand, from $5 to $8. Clothes can be made at home. My two rooms were a veritable delight to me, for I am a natural home maker. They were at the back of the house and overlooking a tiny lawn and pretty bushes. This is how I figure my expenses by the month:

Rent	$ 8.00
Car fare	2.40
Clothing	4.00
Kerosene (fuel)	1.00
Church	.50
Newspaper	.24
Food	6.00
Five shares in Co-operative Bank	5.00
	$26.59

I do not eat lunch only apple or orange, taking hearty meat breakfast.

This leaves a good margin for extras. Now you may think the amount for food low. I buy three pounds of hamburg steak a week at 10 cents a pound, one package of macaroni at 8 cents or rice at 5 cents a pound. There are lots of ways of using the hamburg with macaroni. I buy a quart of onions, 5 cents worth of carrots or turnip, quart of potatoes, two pounds stew beef at 8 cents, sometimes varying this by getting a small fresh pork shoulder or forequarter lamb. You can get chops, a roast and stew from this. By going to the market on Saturday between 5 to 9 you will be surprised at the low prices.

Cannot Have Big Bank Account.

Editor AMERICAN:

I must admit that any girl cannot have a large yearly bank account by living on $8 a week. Yet a girl can live honestly and dress comfortably.

I left a nice home in a Maine town, and was ambitious to make good in "The Big City." The second year I secured employment at $5 per week. In less than two months my pay was increased to $6 per week, and on that I managed to live happy.

I presented a pretty dress costing $15, which I wear only on a rare occasion. My shoes cost me $3 per pair and last the two seasons. I have a good rain coat, which cost me $10.50. Here is how I live:

Board and room	$4.00
Car fares	.90
Other necessaries	1.00
Total	5.90
Saving	1.10

My landlady gave me the privilege of doing my own washing and ironing. That is worth something and to me.

At present I am doing table work at $5 per week, but as Lent approaches three meals a day is means more than $8 per week.

Don't Try It, Her Advice.

Editor AMERICAN:

When rent, food, laundry and carfare are quoted as taking $7, that would seem the extent of living expenses," but in reality there are so many others that it would almost seem as if those were but the beginning.

Can a girl go week after week in the glorious Summer weather with no outing to parks or beaches, no hours no fancy work during the long Winter evenings? If she has friends who give her these things she is not living on $8, and if she doesn't get them, their life won't seem worth living.

Dear country girl, don't try living in Boston on $8 a week. For $8 you will get a most terrible awakening.

Something for Bank.

Editor AMERICAN:

I have been an interested reader of the letters of the working girl as to whether a girl can live on $8 per week.

I must say yes. I have worked in the city of New York. This is how I manage on $8.00:

Room, $1.50; laundry, 50 cents; luncheons, $1.75. (Any landlady will let you have a little hot water for cocoa.)
Dinner	$ .20
Milk	.15
Beverages	.10
Cereals	.05
Bread	.05
Meat	.20
Fruit	.05
Sugar	.05
Cake	.10
Pies, pieces of	.10
small jar dry beef	.10
Eggs	.20
Vegetables	.20
Clothes	1.00
Car and amusements	.50
Total	$ 3.00

Church Influence a Help.

As to whether or not a girl can live respectably on $8 a week in the large city, I think it can be done. I have lived in and near New York city nearly all my life and have always earned my own living (but)

If I had to earn my own living again in a large city, almost the first thing I would do would be to join some nearby church, where I would make friends with nice people, and one nearly always find among them someone who is willing to take a girl into their home and table at least moderately, even though they make little or nothing on it; it helps their table.

Back Pay, 27 Years Overdue, Surprises Swampscott Cop

Policeman "Charley" Connell of the Swampscott force thinks he's a world's champion for getting pay long overdue. The patrolman has just received two days' pay for work he did TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS ago. Today Swampscott officers stopped him on his beat to make him tell how it happened. Here's his story:

"Charley" used to drive horse in the ancient days. He quit to take a job on the police force, forgetting all about the two days' wages he had coming to him. He got to joking about the pay a few days ago. He told a railway mail agent, saying he thought he'd take boat all the "conscience money" stories he ever heard. The railway man told his company about it, and the first thing "Charley" knew was the arrival of the envelope with the overdue pay.

P. S.—"Charley" admits he didn't get a fortune. He didn't even get the interest on the pay he ought to have gotten twenty-seven years ago. What he got will go a step toward keeping him in new buttons or tobacco—perhaps.

USE RADIUM RAYS EMANATIONS IN NEW DISEASE TREATMENT

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30.—A department for the treatment of diseases by means of the inhalation of the emanations of radium rays will be established at the Johns Hopkins Hospital shortly.

So far as is known the Johns Hopkins Hospital will be the first medical institution in the United States to adopt this treatment.

Almost since the discovery of the value of the mineral the use of radium has been confined exclusively to the treatment in surgical cases. Patients undergoing the new treatment will be placed in a compartment which will be known as the "Emanatorium." There they will breathe in the air laden with the radium emanations. Treatment for ordinary cases will take about three weeks. Both rich and poor will have an equal opportunity to undergo the treatment.

WINTER BUTTERFLY ON LONG ISLAND FARM MAKES CAT A MEAL

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The truth of the appended yarn is a matter between John DeNyse of Greenlawn, L. I., and his own conscience. Out in the DeNyse's woodshed, he says, a large, handsome butterfly resided it was Summer, so warm was the sunlight that shone upon its cocoon through the window, and so it emerged and fluttered its wings. DeNyse, so he says, saw it and took it into the house where he placed it before a plate of honey big enough for all the butterflies in North America. According to DeNyse, the butterfly made a good meal, and then Tige, the family cat, happened along. "Tige" made a short meal of the butterfly.

49 YEARS AGO THEY 'KICKED' ON THE NEW HAVEN

Charles S. Mellen, president of the New Haven R.R.road, has one resolution when it comes to a consideration of complaints of bad service—it was just as bad forty nine years ago, long before he got on the job.

If this is doubted read the letter of the original New Haven kicker published in Harper's Weekly on January 30, 1864, and note these familiar phrases:

"Arriving in New York about six hours late."

Overcrowding of the cars on this road is notorious."

"Slinglers and want of consideration for the public."

"The cavern called a station at New Haven."

The letter follows:

DELAYS ON THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD.

The passengers from Boston by the night train on Saturday, the 16th of January, were due in New York early on Sunday morning. The train reached New Haven at half-past two in the morning, where it should have met the train upon the Shore Road, and the same locomotive would have drawn both to New York. The Shore train was not there. It did not arrive for more than five hours; and during all that time the passengers were detained in a cavern called a station at New Haven, simply because the New Haven Company does not choose to provide for the most common occurrence, namely, a delay upon the Shore Road. Arriving in New York toward Sunday noon, about six hours late, there was not the slightest provision at the station in Twenty-seventh street, for the convenience of the passengers. There was not a carriage to be found, and even the luggage was carried off into the Harlem station.

The overcrowding of the cars upon this road is notorious, and is the subject of indignant complaint in the daily papers; but such an outrageous delay as that of Saturday night, caused by the slightness and total want of consideration for the public convenience upon the part of the management of the New Haven Company ought to be universally exposed. The poor conductor was overpowered with every form of impatient complaint, but his instructions, he said, were imperative, and he could not disobey them.

WILL GIVE FORTUNE TO CHURCH WORK

ATLANTA, Jan. 30.—Prosperity having blessed him as best he has accumulated a fortune, H. Z. Duke of Dallas, Tex., who owns twenty-one stores in that State, announces that from now on he would work for the benefit of Christianity. Four years ago he and his wife covenanted to give all they had to the church, provided they were allowed by God to make $100,000 clear, and the sum asked has been secured.

Housekeepers of Philadelphia Will Seek a State Charter

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 30.—The Housekeepers' League has decided to incorporate the organization and have a board of twelve directors. Within the next few weeks application will be made at Harrisburg for the charter.

Mrs. William H. Derr, president of the league, which is now selling fresh eggs for twenty-seven cents a dozen, has placed the matter in the hands of no attorney, A. E. Hutchinson, with offices in the Real Estate Trust building.

It was announced that the bills for cold storage, shipping and the abolition of the trading-stamp fiend in Pennsylvania, being prepared by the league, have been completed and will be presented to the Legislature every next month.

It is announced that many retailers are being forced to lower their prices for fresh eggs and the rise of regular eggs is continuing steadily.

Fresh eggs at 27 cents will be sold in all the league stations until the Spring.

Capricious Kaiser May Pick Wetzler as Royal Opera Leader

Cables from Berlin say that the most likely successor of Dr. Emil Paur as court conductor of the Royal Opera of Berlin is Kappelmeister Wetzler of Riga, Boston, New York and other cities are watching with great interest the action of the capricious Kaiser in connection with a new director.

Dr. Muck, conductor of the Symphony Orchestra of Boston, was succeeded by Director Paur, well known in this country. The Kaiser liked Dr. Muck, but it is generally believed that Dr. Muck was happy enough when he got away from Berlin.

Dr. Paur resigned to "take a much needed rest" when the Kaiser ordered that Leo Blech, the second conductor, wield the baton at a recent performance of "The Flying Dutchman." Musicians are wondering if Wetzler will be another victim of royal displeasure.

Wetzler began his musical career in America. He went to Hamburg and from there to Riga, where he has been four years. He conducted "Tannhauser" at the Royal Opera in Berlin last night, and it was the reception accorded him that gave rise to the belief that he will be called to Berlin permanently.

GIRL SWIMMER IS ENTERED FOR VENUS CONTEST

Standing out unmistakingly as a competitor among the many Venuses of New England who have entered the AMERICAN contest of feminine symmetry comes today Miss Alice Damon of No. 2 Central street, East Boston.

These are the measurements of Miss Damon:

Height—5 ft. 3 in.
Bust—36 in.
Waist—24 in.
Hips—37 in.
Neck—13 in.
Calf—14 in.

Miss Damon is well known to the followers of swimming. She has won applause in many swimming events and was a contestant in the big girls' swimming race held by the AMERICAN in the Charles River basin last Summer.

Miss Damon is a social as well as an athletic favorite in East Boston and her superb physical development—due in part to her natatorial practice—is cited by many as well entitling her to rank with the Venuses de Milo of today.

The AMERICAN receives new letters every day on the Venus contest. Among the latest is the following:

A 19-Year-Old.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

I would like to enter in the Venus contest, for after looking over measurements of some of the older girls I think I am entitled to consideration.

My measurements are: Height 5 feet 7 inches; age, 19; weight, 162 pounds; neck, 14 inches; bust, 36; waist, 24; hips, 39½; thigh, 25; calf, 15½; ankle, 9. I wear a number 5 shoe easily. Respectfully,

JENNIE L. COOLEY.

BEACH LEAKY SHIP AFTER SHE GROUNDED

Word was received in Boston today that the barge Hackensack, bound from New York to this port, had been beached by the tug Underwriter at Vineyard Haven, after having torn a hole in her hull when she grounded on Pollock Rip Slue. The Hackensack and three feet of water in her hold when beached.

When Your Hair is Faded or Brittle

"A beautiful growth of long glossy and fluffy hair can be had by every woman—hair of rich, even color," writes Mrs. Mae Martyn in the Los Angeles Post.

"The only condition to this is that shampooing be indulged in at least once a month. And a word about what to use: Never, no never, employ soaps or mixtures containing free alkali, because of the disastrous effects following.

"A dependable and really delightful shampoo mixture can be made by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. This is enough for a thorough cleansing of both scalp and hair. After a canthrox shampoo the hair dries evenly and quickly and regains its former shade, soft fluffiness and rich gloss. Nothing is so effective for removing dandruff and keeping the scalp healthy and pliant."—Advertisement.

INDIGESTION AND RHEUMATISM

People With Good Digestion Do Not Have Rheumatism.

The blood is the product of digestion. Whatever sort of food is digested in the stomach is absorbed into the blood. If the food is badly digested, this is also absorbed into the blood. If the food sours in the stomach before digestion or during digestion, the acids are absorbed into the blood.

These acids in the blood produce a condition known as rheumatism. The acids are liable to produce microscopic crystals. These crystals are deposited in the ligaments and cartilages, causing rheumatism of the joints. Sometimes in the bones, producing periodic pains every time a storm approaches. Sometimes in the muscles, producing lumbago, stiff neck, myalgia, and muscular rheumatism generally.

Pe-ru-na Corrects Digestion.

The reason that Pe-ru-na relieves such cases is easy to understand. Pe-ru-na corrects digestion. Pe-ru-na corrects digestion partly by hurrying it. Pe-ru-na does not furnish any artificial digestant, it simply assists Nature in doing its own digesting.

In this way the products of digestion are more normal. The blood is not filled with imperfectly digested food. No acids accumulate in the stomach while Pe-ru-na is being taken. Thus rheumatism is prevented.

It is a great deal better to prevent a disease than to try to cure it. But even after rheumatism has begun the condition that caused it ought to be removed if possible.

Good Digestion Stops Rheumatism.

The first thing to do is to secure good digestion, then if it is necessary specific medicines for rheumatism may be taken. But until the digestion is made perfect it is of little or no use to take medicines for rheumatism. To produce good digestion Pe-ru-na should be taken.

Pe-ru-na, Man-a-lin and La-cu-pia manufactured by the Pe-ru-na Company, Columbus, Ohio. Sold at all drugs stores. No. 42.

TIN-CAN ALARM SAVED TROOPS FROM DEATH

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—A home-made "burglar alarm," formed of bunches of tin cans tied to a barbed-wire fence, was all that saved three companies of the Eighth United States Cavalry from being slaughtered by the Moros last Monday, according to War Department dispatches today.

Before the men returned on Sunday night the sentinels on duty at the camp strung several strands of barbed wire around the encampment and then placed bunches of tin cans at intervals on this barrier. Shortly after midnight a band of about 100 Moros crept through the underbrush and were snared by the scrambling until the jangling of the cans gave notice of their approach.

A serious battle ensued, in which the Americans beat off the natives with difficulty, losing one man and having four seriously wounded. The Moros used their bolos with effect, but the concentrated fire of the American troops forced them to retreat, leaving half their number dead on the ground.

MEN ACCUSED OF LURING GIRLS TO PITTSFIELD

PITTSFIELD, Jan. 30.—Accused of enticing Rose Smith, the twenty-one-year-old wife of Thomas Smith, a Hartford painter, to his hotel, the Farmers' Inn, near here, Salvatai Zucco was accused before United States Commissioner Wood today of violating the Mann "white slave act." Joseph S. Long was also arraigned and held in bail of $5,000 built at the instance of J. A. Poulin, investigator for the Department of Justice, stationed in Boston.

The girl was found with another young woman, who gave her name as Anne Dumas, when Chief of Police Dean raided the place Monday night. The police seized $150 worth of liquors and arrested the two men and the two girls. The girls pleaded guilty and were held for sentence. Zucco and Long pleaded not guilty and were admitted to bail.

Assistant District Attorney Wright questioned the Smith girl. She told him that the two men had enticed her from Hartford, where she had been living with her husband. She said she came from Clinton, originally.

Wright communicated with United States Attorney Preneh in Boston, who sent Chief and Deputy Marshal Leyden of Springfield here.

WOMAN SCARES BEAR OUT OF HER SCHOOL

DENVER, Col., Jan. 30.—A big grizzly bear scared into a school house in Albany Park, forty miles from here, and Miss Helen Warren, of Jamestown, N. Y., the teacher, locked herself in a room. She successfully that after a few moments brute turned tail and slowly left the building.

Miss Warren has resigned. A male teacher will be engaged to take her place.

THE HUMAN BODY GROWS DISEASED FROM DISUSE

"An excellent illustration of the harm Nervous Debility does to the human body," said John Beazley Webb, who is assisting in the introduction of Tona Vita in Boston, "is that of the sword, which, kept too long in a scabbard, will grow rusty and eat into itself for lack of something else to hew and hack.

"Nervous Debility affects the brain so that it no longer has complete mastery over the vital organs of the body; the consequence is that the organs grow sluggish, because they have no orders from the brain, and the next thing you know, grown out of their lack of use, they begin to destroy themselves instead of eliminating wasted matters.

"While their body is in this state many people make the mistake of taking different remedies which will perform the function these different organs were supposed to perform naturally. This only makes the organ grow more sluggish, and will eventually make the condition chronic.

"Tona Vita uses logical methods in relieving Nervous Debility. It does not bother itself with symptoms, but goes down to the bed rock of the trouble and clears up the whole nervous system, and it quickly follows that the rest of the body will regain its normal health.

"Tona Vita has been wonderfully successful in this country, where people enjoy their vitality by their strenuous lives. It has proved a great boon to people who find their rest broken at night, to those who have poor appetites, who suffer from headaches, insomnia, fits of 'blue' and despondency. In fact, in all cases where the patient has felt run down.

"Tona Vita is becoming very popular in Boston, to judge from the reports of the different druggists."

HELENE VINCENT, WHO SENDS AID TO MRS. POWER

SYMPATHY AND MONEY SENT TO AID MRS. POWER

Following the printing in the AMERICAN of the touching story told to Miss Angela Morgan by Mrs. Elizabeth Power of Lynn, who accidentally killed her husband while protecting herself against his attack, several letters were received by this newspaper expressing sympathy for the poor woman who is now a prisoner facing a serious charge. Some of the letters contained $5 and the other $2. This money has been sent to Mrs. Power. The letters written by the generous-hearted donors follow:

From a Mother.

Editor AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Enclosed please find $2 for Mrs. Power or her little children. I have the most heartfelt sympathy for her to be away from her children, especially one, just one year old; and the great sorrow she must have to be in such an awful predicament, as she certainly must show to any one that to care for so many children and do other work besides, she must be a good woman. Your paper has raised funds for others in trouble, and I send this $2, hoping to soon see it raised to $2,000. I don't know of, or never have, seeing the woman, and am not particular about my name being in the paper, only to show this letter is from a mother of only one child. Yours respectfully,

MRS. J. M. MURPHY,
42 Van Winkle street, Ashmont.

P. S.—If it will help any to sign my name to the letter when printed I have no objection.

Touched By Story.

Editor AMERICAN:

Today I read that soul-stirring and heart-aching story by Angela Morgan on "Way I Killed My Husband"—Mrs. Power. It is a story that should make every man and woman in the State of Massachusetts stop and think. It tells of a terrible problem which uplifters, philanthropists and social workers have been unable to solve.

Why should Mrs. Power—a good woman—be made to suffer terrible humiliation of being brought into court to face the legal red tape because she defended her own life and the lives of her beautiful children? As a woman I say she should be set free immediately and if any action whatever be taken, she should be given a gold medal for having the courage, the nerve to protect herself against a beast and not allow herself to be dragged down to a living death by a lump of clay that is often called "a man."

I am . . . enclosing a check for $5, which I wish you would send to Mrs. Power for the children. It is not much, but perhaps some other women in Boston and vicinity would like to help the children and the grief-stricken mother. I would like to do something for the little ones. They are to be pitied. Let every woman in Massachusetts do something for the Power "kiddies." Just a kind word of sympathy—a little bouquet of flowers will bring a little cheer to the woman who is now sadly in need of friends.

SICKLES' SON IS THREATENED WITH DEATH

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Stanton Sickles, son of General Daniel E. Sickles, whose financial and domestic affairs have involved him in a sensational scandal, declared today he had received a death threat from a brother of the mysterious society woman upon him, he charges. General Sickles squandered his fortune and his affection.

The threat was made, Stanton said, because he had given out a number of love letters written by General Sickles to her over a period of many years.

Not Afraid, He Says.

"I shall not cease giving out these letters until my father's housekeeper, Miss Elanor Wilmerding, is driven from his house," said Stanton. "I am not afraid."

Although the name of the mysterious society woman with whom General Sickles was connected has not yet been made public, she is no wise connected with Miss Wilmerding.

Stanton Sickles' resentment against Miss Wilmerding has arisen, he says, because General Sickles presented her with real estate and other gifts worth a fortune, thereby decreasing als prospective inheritance.

Continuing his war of words with his father, whom he accuses of squandering on women his own and his sister's inheritances, Stanton Sickles has given out several of the fervent love letters his father wrote in 1890, when he was seventy-six, to the woman who since has been happily married and is now prominent in society in this city. Her name is being kept secret.

In one letter there was this sentence: "If you do not wait (before marrying another) three graves will be filled the same day."

"I am driven to this in my efforts to bring my father to terms," said the son in making public the missives. "He refuses to accept the offer my mother and I have made to pay all his debts and set him right with the world provided that he gets rid of his housekeeper, Miss. Wilmerding. He refuses even to see us and has turned us out of his house with insults.

"He persists in posing as a martyr to the general public when in reality he has brought all his troubles upon himself. Women have helped him to squander his own fortune as well as my mother's and sister's. Therefore, I do not hesitate to show his affairs with women—this one in particular."

Written in 1896.

All the letters which Stanton exhibited yesterday were written by his father soon after the woman in question had announced to the old general that their affair was at an end, and that she would not again meet him. That was in 1896, Stanton said. In that year the woman married.

The first missive which the son made public had been written in the form of notes on the back of a check and then copied. It read:

Blanche (this, by the way, is not the woman's right name, but was General Sickles' pet title for her):

You have been my life. Now you take it from me and you leave me to die without a thought my pain or suffering.

If you were beside yourself with jealousy; if I had made myself unworthy of you; if we had not lived for each other so many years; if I had not been more devoted to you than to any other woman I have ever known; if we had not enjoyed a honeymoon of undisturbed delight lasting for years and years, I could understand your coolness as a mere caprice.

But I cannot understand this divorce without a reason—this swift, sudden change from love to hate which has come like lightning from a cloudless sky.

The second letter Stanton gave out was written a few days later. It ran:

You have given me so many years of your life! You and I are inseparable! You and I are one! You must not leave me now!

I attended St. Bartholomew's Church last Sunday. If you had stayed true this year we might have stood together at that altar, united forever! But now only my coffin will rest there!

I sat in Dr. Greer's pew. I walked up your aisle, where so often you walked.

Writing the third letter made public, General Sickles apparently had left the city of Massachusetts stop and think. It tells of a terrible problem which uplifters, philanthropists and social workers have been unable to solve.

Why should Mrs. Power—a good woman—be made to suffer terrible humiliation of being brought into court to face the legal red tape because she defended her own life and the lives of her beautiful children? As a woman I say she should be set free immediately and if any action whatever be taken, she should be given a gold medal for having the courage, the nerve to protect herself against a beast and not allow herself to be dragged down to a living death by a lump of clay that is often called "a man."

I am . . . enclosing a check for $5, which I wish you would send to Mrs. Power for the children. It is not much, but perhaps some other women in Boston and vicinity would like to help the children and the grief-stricken mother. I would like to do something for the little ones. They are to be pitied. Let every woman in Massachusetts do something for the Power "kiddies." SAYS 'DAKOTA' WANTED CROOK TO ROB HOUSE

Dakota Dan, the Russell claimant, admitted to Horace G. Whitmore of Minneapolis that he had arranged to have "a Boston crook" break into the Russell house in Melrose to get some things of his, but Attorney Traxler, Dakota Dan's first lawyer, refused the money "to pull it off," according to Mr. Whitmore's testimony at the Russell identity hearing today.

Mr. Whitmore quoted Dakota Dan as saying Traxler "might be a good lawyer, but was too honest."

The Russell case was resumed at East Cambridge after a recess from last Friday. Master G. A. A. Percy has been in a Land Court case in Boston.

Dakota Dan was there and walked now and then at the Whitmore testimony against him. Neither Fresno Dan nor William C. Russell were at the morning session.

Read Verses Again.

Mr. Whitmore's direct testimony concluded with reading the "poem" Dakota Dan said he had written at the "Poet of the Bad Lands," and which was printed when Mr. Whitmore testified at the first Russell trial.

This "poem," as it did before, caused amusement, and at the end of it Attorney Scharton, counsel for Dakota Dan, said to Master Percy:

"Before I begin cross-examination of Mr. Whitmore I would ask for a recess of ten minutes to recover from the shock of that poem."

The recess was granted.

Mr. Whitmore is a man to whom Dakota Dan is said to have applied for financial aid to prosecute his identity claim. Asked if Dakota Dan had commented any on his former lawyer, Charles J. Traxler, Mr. Whitmore said:

Whitmore's Testimony.

Dakota Dan told me Traxler might be a good lawyer, but he was too honest. Dakota Dan said: "Traxler wanted me to give my whole case up before they had agreed to settle."

Dakota Dan told me he had told Traxler on the way back home that he didn't agree to any of their propositions because it would lead up to his life at Macon, N. Y.

Dakota Dan also said to me: "I had everything fixed up with a fellow over Boston to break into the house and he would be brought into it to get some of the things that belonged to me, but Traxler wouldn't give me the money to pull it off."

Why He Left Home.

Mr. Whitmore said that at first Dakota Dan told that he left home because his folks didn't treat him right and he had to work like a common laborer. He left home and became a tramp.

"He said," continued Mr. Whitmore, "that he would go home and tell Willie all. He said, 'Willie won't have the heart to turn me down.' He began to cry."

When Dakota Dan came back from Melrose, however, he told Mr. Whitmore according to the latter's testimony, that the reason he had left home was "because he had discovered his father in some scandal with a woman of the household."

Mr. Whitmore added: "When I asked him why he didn't say that in the first place, he said he wanted to protect the family name, but that Willie had turned him down, he felt he had to let loose."

LINER TWO MONTHS CROSSING ATLANTIC FROM CHRISTIANIA

Thirty-six days overdue, the Scandinavian-American liner Louisiana arrived today from Copenhagen and Christiania, after having been storm swept on the North Atlantic for nearly two months on a voyage that should have taken eighteen days. Twice the Louisiana had to put into ports for coal.

Upon Orsted had to put in first at Portland, England, for coal. When the Louisiana was a little more than halfway to the Nova Scotia shore, he had to be about one run to Fayal, in the Azores, for more coal. Every one vessel found ten other craft in the same plight, all of which damaged.

"January 10, we ran into such a storm that we thought we would all be lost," said Captain Orsted today. "It was a very solemn time, and I was very much afraid that we would never reach port."

CASSIDY TELLS POINTS WON FOR HONEST BUTTER AND CHEESE STATUTES

HARRY P. Cassidy today discusses the testimony and arguments at the hearing on the honest cheese and honest butter bills yesterday. The hearing was held before the Joint Committee on Agriculture, Senator Charles W. Ward of Buckland, chairman. The friends of the bills, and the opponents, each presented their case, and at the close of the session, Senator Ward announced that the committee would allow each side a week to present arguments regarding the standard to be fixed before final action should be taken on the bills.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The opponents of the cheese and butter bills before the Joint Committee on Agriculture, at the hearing yesterday, shifted their ground and in a last desperate attempt to kill the bills, argued that the standards established were wrong and should be altered.

Talk was in spite of the fact that at previous hearings, Alton E. Briggs, executive secretary of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, and other speakers, had declared the cheese standard was a fair one, and this was also in spite of the fact that A. P. Lee, president of the same exchange, had declared that the butter standard fixing a maximum of sixteen per cent. butter, was fair.

The shift of ground on the part of the opponents of the bill followed arguments that had demonstrated the weakness of their other arguments. Their attack on the standards was a last resort.

The history of the opposition to the bills can be summarized as follows:

First—They opposed the cheese bill on the ground that a person might not to be obliged to carry home a packaged article called "skim-milk cheese" for fear of embarrassment.

This argument was dropped after a plain intimation came that the committee that "that's an old story. It has been tried before, but it has no weight."

Joker Plan Given Up.

Second—They admitted that the standards fixed in both bills were right. As a last resort they have now attacked these standards.

Third—They attempted to inject a joker in the bill—the little word "knowingly"—which would have nullified the force of the bill. The argument of Judge Joseph J. Corbett for the bill disposed of this attempt and the joker was abandoned.

A. P. Lee, president of the Fruit and Produce Exchange, made the principal argument against the butter bill. He attacked the butter standard —a maximum of sixteen per cent. water, and a minimum of 82 per cent. butter fat. There was something like a threat in his words when he went on:

"The consuming public has got to be taken care of, either by us, or by legislation. If we think we're dishonest—get someone else.

"I don't see a thing in this bill to benefit the consumer. It will just make the retailer and the wholesaler extra trouble."

Francis Batchelder of Somerville declared there was no public demand for the bill from the people who most fly use milk cheese. He said: "The people here to demand this legislation don't eat it in the same sense that the ordinary user eats it."

The bill is not designed to aid the retailer who sells skim cheese for full cream cheese, but it does protect the consumer, he said.

The bill is designed to hit the dealer who sells skim milk cheese as cream cheese, and at cream cheese prices.

Alton E. Briggs stated that skim cheese has a higher food value than cream cheese. This is probably true. But if this be the case, it is a fact that serves to remove one more legitimate objection to telling the consumer what he is buying.

Knows What He Is Selling

The retailer knows what he is selling. There is no reason why—if he be ashamed to admit what he is selling. Yet Mr. Briggs would have us believe that the retailer does not want to admit to the customer that the customer is buying skim milk cheese. I do not believe it.

I believe an honest retailer anywhere is ready to tell his customer, if that customer buys cheese, whether the cheese is or is not skim milk cheese.

The cheese bill is designed simply and solely to force all retailers, honest or dishonest, to tell their customers the nature of the cheese.

Mr. Briggs opposes.

The hearing was a crowded one. There were a score of women present, including Mrs. Ida M. Heiland, Mrs. J. L. Stearns, Mrs. Anna T. Sieloanor, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, Miss Jean Mc-Pherson and others representing the Housekeepers' League. The hearing was delayed by the long adjournment of the House of Representatives.

There were no further attacks from the representatives of the farmers and opponents of the bill, upon the AMERICAN or upon myself. The opponents of the bill had come armed with clippings from the AMERICAN, evidently prepared for further attacks upon the paper that is leading the fight for pure and honest food. It was stated that the Fruit and Produce Exchange had voted to oppose the bills which have been introduced into the Legislature, or not, I cannot say. If it so be, they make a mistake. For the bills are honest bills, for honest foods. And by lining up in opposition, the association lines itself up with the foes of honest foods.

These Bills Have Merit.

But there were no attacks upon the AMERICAN. For Senator Ward announced:

"I have told the gentlemen that there is to be nothing said about the newspapers, in the balance of this hearing."

Judge Joseph J. Corbett opened the fight for the bill. He said in part:

"The gentlemen who opposed these bills said they didn't want to be recorded as opposing pure measures for the public health.

"They said the standards were fair, but they wanted to show this committee how to draw a more perfect bill.

"There was some criticism of the Mayor, of myself, of people who have aided this bill, and of one of the metropolitan dailies that is very well able to take care of itself.

"But the question is—have these bills merit? Our opponents admit they have. Then they ask a favorable report on them.

"They suggest that the word 'knowingly' be put into the bill. We don't want that word. We would prefer to have the bill as it stands than to have that word be stuck in.

"Caveat emptor,' said one opponent of the bill. But he is wrong. The seller should beware. A person is not obliged to sell anything for food—but if he undertakes to sell them, the State should see to it that he sells only pure and honest food.

"Let the merchant make a profit—a big one if he wishes. But make him be honest with his customers.

"I want to thank most heartily the press and the public for coming up here to support this bill. The bill is supported by the State Board of Health, the Massachusetts State Dairy Association, the City of Boston, and every city and town in the State that has milk inspection."

E. J. Slattery of Dorchester made a striking speech in support of the bill. He attacked the dictum of one of the opponents of the bill that "you have to have confidence in the retailers." He said:

"I come in here to argue for the right of the people to know what they are buying.

Women Speak for Bill.

"All over the land the same cry is arising from the people—'Give us honest food. . . . de question arises, can we trust our retailers?

"Inspectors of weights and measures in Massachusetts last year found 18,000 cheating measures or scales. Federal officials investigating in Boston found thirty-eight per cent. of the scales were cheating, twenty-two per cent. of the 'old measures, and ten per cent. of the 'new measures.' They found two hundred and thirty-nine cases of short weights.

"We believe the time has arrived when the public will know what it is getting—when the public demands that right. The cry of the people against adulterated, poisonous and fraudulent foods should be heard."

Winfield S. Tuck of Winchester spoke for the bill. Then F. M. Harwood, of the State Dairy Bureau, asked to be put on record as favoring it. He said:

"Since this bill was introduced, I have sent out and bought five samples of cheese at random. Three of the five were skim milk cheese. The price was twenty cents in four cases, and eighteen in the other. I have also tested two samples of butter, where the water content was within the limit set in the bill."

Mrs. Anna T. Sieloanor made an effective speech for the bill. She said:

"The retailers have a law to protect them from cheating by the wholesaler. How can they deny to the consumer the same protection against the few dishonest grocers among their own number?

"Mr. Briggs said women do not buy intelligently. Let me tell you, if you will just force the retailer to be honest with his customer—so that when a woman buys, she can find out what she is buying—and you will find that the women do buy intelligently."

Mrs. Charlotte Smith made the concluding speech in favor of the bill. Then the opponents opened their arguments.

CUT HIGH LIVING COST BY CO-OPERATION URGES COLLEGE HEAD

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—Co-operation and direct business relations between producer and consumer will go a long way toward solving the high cost of living problem, declared Dr. H. J. Waters, president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, told the Kansas Society of Chicago.

"High cost of living is due not so much to the price the farmer receives for his product as is the high cost of getting these products from the farm to the consumer," he said.

FOSS' COUNCIL UNANIMOUS FOR KING'S PARDON

The Governor's Council is unanimous for the unconditional pardoning of Cardozo Le King, now in the Bridgewater State Hospital serving a ten-year sentence for larceny in connection with stock transactions.

This information came to the AMERICAN today from an authoritative source, following the hearing yesterday on the King petition and the adjournment of the matter until next Wednesday.

The Council is in somewhat of a quandary as to their power in the matter. Governor Foss recommended the pardon of King with the proviso that as soon as his health permitted he should be sent back to prison and his term served out. The Council doubts their right to grant King an unconditional pardon unless the Governor takes the initiative in the move.

Lieutenant-Governor Walsh is in New York and Councillor Alexander McGregor was called out of the city on business. As soon as these members of the body return the Council will consult Governor Foss, communicate their wishes in the matter and see what can be done about it.

It is believed that when Governor Foss learns how the Council stands in the case he will consent to new papers being made out, in which King will be granted an unconditional pardon.

The members of the Council sized the matter up in this manner:

Why should King be released in order that his life might be saved when he faces the fact that every step made in better health means a step toward prison? Such a situation, the Councillors felt, would not assist a sick man very much in regaining his health.

The facts in connection with the hearing were communicated to King today, and it was said that he felt that there is reason for him in hope for a pardon.

Governor Foss' secretary, Mr. Sherman, asked today what the procedure would be under the circumstances in the King case, said:

"Personally, I should think that if the Council is unanimous for King's pardon, new application would be made out by the Governor, but, of course, I do not know what course the Governor would take in the matter."

NEW ENGLAND NOTES.

MARLBORO—Mrs. John Rafferty, aged sixty-six, whose clothing caught fire while the family was at mass Sunday, died at her home today.

NEW BRITAIN, Ct.—In twenty-five years Miss Martha A. Parsons has risen from the position of copyholder to the secretaryship of a two million dollar corporation here, and is believed to hold a more responsible position than any other woman in Connecticut.

CONCORD, N. H.—Representative Frank A. Rogers of Newport has introduced in the Legislature a bill providing for municipal theatres for towns.

NORTHAMPTON—The art gallery of Smith College has received a valuable gift of pottery from Rev. Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus of Chicago.

SPRINGFIELD—Thomas F. McGinn has been elected prosecuting attorney to succeed Raymond A. Brown.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—E. W. Griffin, a first-class seaman in the United States navy, was sentenced to three years in jail in the naval prison here for desertion.

EDWIN GINN DEFENDED BY G. W. ANDERSON

George W. Anderson, the Boston attorney, today came to the defence of Edwin Ginn, whose model tenements were criticised by Edward Harriman. In a letter to the AMERICAN, Mr. Anderson, who is a trustee of the Charlesbank Homes, says:

Editor of the AMERICAN:

In the issue of your paper of last Sunday, I find, in startling headline, "Ginn and Cullins Accused," followed by further headlines, "Model Tenement Scored," and this followed by a very harsh and inaccurate criticism of the Charlesbank Home by Edward F. Harriman.

Edwin Ginn, the victim of the headline, has contributed more than $2,000,000 to improve the housing conditions in this city, building this home on Charlesbank, arranged for families something as Dr. Perin has organized the Franklin Square House for working girls. He is rewarded for his public spirit and his philanthropy by the attack from Mr. Harriman and this headline in your paper.

He deeded this property to a board of trustees of a charitable corporation in 1911. People like Professor Sedgwick of Technology, Professor Carver of Harvard, Professor Coman of Wellesley, Samuel B. Capen, president of the Chamber of Commerce Board, and others, including myself, constitute the board of trustees. Each one of us is legally and morally responsible for the management of the Charlesbank Homes in which Mr. Ginn has such an interest, we defer to his views whenever we consistently can.

Neither Mr. Ginn nor anybody on the board of trustees can, under the charter and by-laws, directly or indirectly receive one dollar out of this enterprise.

It is not intended to pauperize the tenants. Any profits or income derived on the $2,000,000 investment of nearly $200,000 is expended in the same good work of improving the housing conditions in the Commonwealth. I submit that the man who devotes such a sum of money to such a purpose is entitled to better treatment than this sort of headline.

A word as to Mr. Hartman: The board of trustees, anxious for all the light they could get in administering this enterprise, sought Mr. Hartman's advice. He wrote us a report, making recommendations in many impracticable, few if any of which we were able to follow. We paid him $150 for the service which we could not follow. He is the only person, on or off the board of directors and trustees of people here or elsewhere connected, who has received one dollar of compensation, except as to rents, for the service of the Homes. I do not care to criticise the taste shown in the speech he made.

Very truly yours,

GEORGE W. ANDERSON.

You can surely end Grippe and break up the most severe cold, either in head, chest, back, stomach or limbs, by taking a dose of Pape's Cold Compound every two hours until three consecutive doses are taken.

It promptly relieves the most miserable headache, dullness, head and nose stuffed up, feverishness, sneezing, sore throat, mucous catarrhal discharges, running of the nose, soreness, stiffness and rheumatic twinges.

Take this wonderful Compound as directed, don't interfere with your usual duties and with the knowledge that there is nothing else in the world which will cure your cold or end Grippe misery as promptly and without any other assistance or bad after-effects as a 25-cent package of Pape's Cold Compound, which any druggist can supply—accept no substitute—contains no quinine—belongs in every home. Tastes nice.

Harriman's Son Voted Most Popular Senior at Yale

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 30.—Yale's star athletes and their admirers haven't recovered from the surprise package handed them in the annual balloting of the seniors for expressions of opinions about members of the class. The athletes didn't fare as well as in past years, and the fact that they didn't set the collegians to wondering today whether or not the athletic stars are losing the mark.

Jesse H. Pillsbie, football player and oarsman, was voted the best athlete in the class, with Douglas Bomeisler winning second. In the other "events" the athletes failed to come out on top. Vanderbilt Webb of New York was voted the most brilliant man. R. W. Robbins was declared the man most likely to succeed and also the hardest worker in the class. W. A. Harriman, son of the late railroad magnate, was voted to be the most popular man. An athlete—Bomeisler—was second best-natured man and also second most popular man. Cole Porter, the singer, was voted the most entertaining man. The son of George B. Cortelyou, former Secretary of the Treasury, came second in the vote for the man most likely to succeed.

SOUTH BOSTON DRUGGIST HELD IN LIQUOR CASE

With the aid of Alfino Allisio, a special employe of Chief Inspector Hart of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, Police Sergeant James Smith of Station No. 6 and Reserve Officer Charles E. Deninger of Station No. 1, "put up a job" that landed Edward Daly, a druggist at No. 18 West Broadway, in Judge Fallon's South Boston court today. He was charged with the illegal sale of liquor.

Smith and Deninger had Allisio ask for a pint of whisky Sunday afternoon. Daly refused to sell it, but the man returned a half hour later and, upon the advice of a Lithuanian clerk, Daly is accused of having sold the drink which Allisio slipped into his hip pocket, went outside, signalled to Smith, and Daly was arrested.

Daly denied that he sold liquor, and John Prince, a South Boston merchant, declared that he saw Daly refuse to sell the liquor.

James F. Creed, counsel for the druggist, said that Daly had been in business seventeen years and had never been arrested. He thought his word ought to be accepted.

Judge Fallon found Daly guilty and fined him $500. He appealed and was held in $1000 bail.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

Eckman's Alterative Highly Praised

A Valuable Remedy for Throat and Lungs.

It is only to believe that Consumption suffers from every other disease is not requiring the use of any medicine for its treatment. For a number of years, an overwhelming mass of valuable testimonials from persons who consider that they owe their lives to Eckman's Alterative, a medicine for Tuberculosis, has been accumulating. Surely plenty of time to demonstrate its lasting value. You can write to any of them. Here is one:

"Gentlemen: In the winter of 1901 I had an attack of the 'grip,' followed by pneumonia and later by Consumption. A great deal of money, in the winter of 1901 and the following winter, I was paid to various doctors, but got no better. Finally, I was induced to try Eckman's Alterative, and after using one bottle of it I found myself much better. I continued to use it, and was completely cured. I was ordered to the mountains, but did not go. Eckman's Alterative was recommended by a friend. Within a few days I was improving. It has improved my appetite, and my weight and strength. I am well and hearty. I have had another attack of the grip, but through gradually lessened until entirely gone. I am perfectly well. Everything I say here can be verified by my family and friends."

Signed, ANNIE E. LAUGHLIN, Jr.

Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchial, Asthmatic, Throat and Lung troubles, Whooping Cough, Croup, Grippe, Pneumonia, Pleurisy, Pain and soreness in the chest, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Loss of voice, Catarrh, Hay Fever, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs, Consumption, and all Throat and Lung troubles. Sold by druggists. Send for booklet telling of recoveries, and write to Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

N. Y. Central to Build Second Big Hotel at Gotham Terminal

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The New York Central is going into the hotel business on a giant scale. Work on the Hitmore, which is to be the Central's hotel west of the new station, at Forty-third and Vanderbilt avenue, is already under way, and now the Central is ready to close contracts for a colossal hostelry to be erected on the site occupied until last month by the Hospital for the Ruptured and Crippled at Forty second street and Lexington avenue.

This house is to contain about 2,000 rooms, almost all with bath, the average price to be $2 a day. It will seek a popular patronage in contradistinction to the Hitmore, where the service is to be on a far more expensive scale.

WILLIAM R. HEARST DENOUNCES TREACHEROUS NEW YORK CITY OFFICIALS FOR SUBWAY STEAL

"I Have Fought the Steal Because It Is a Steal, and Not Because of Any Ulterior Aim or Ambition," He Says. "I Feel a Certain Sense of Responsibility for the Falseness of These Traitorous Officials; I Elected All Except Mayor Gaynor."

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—A letter from William Randolph Hearst on the iniquitous New York city subway deal was read at a meeting of a public protest against that measure last night. Mr. Hearst denounces the New York city officials for their treachery in turning over to J. Pierpont Morgan and his associates the financing of the roads, thus giving to the Money Trust a profit that will exceed $18,000,000 and may reach as high as $35,000,000.

MR. HEARST'S LETTER.

My Dear Mr. O'Loughlin:

I should be very happy to speak at your meeting of protest against the subway steal this evening, but I think I had better not take any personal part which will give the supporters of the steal an opportunity to divert attention from the real issue by assailing my motives and purposes.

Of course, you know that I have fought the steal because it is a steal and not because of any ulterior aims or ambitions.

I have no desire to be anything other than what I am, a citizen concerned for the integrity of the State and the welfare of my fellow citizens, a newspaper man whose newspaper owes its success to the support of the people and not to the subsidies of privilege-seeking corporations.

My only obligation is to the people, my only allegiance is to the people, and my only intention is to serve the people.

In addition to these sufficient reasons, however, I have one special reason for laboring to prevent these traitorous officials of the City of New York from disgracing themselves and defrauding the public:

I elected all of them except Gaynor by adding the votes that the people gave me to the votes that the people gave Mr. Bannard.

Therefore, I feel a certain sense of shameful responsibility for the failure and the falseness of these traitorous officials.

Of course, I knew that Gaynor was a fraud from the moment of his deal with Tammany Hall, but I believed the sacred pledges and solemn oaths of McAneny and Prendergast and Steers and the rest of these renegades, and to the extent that they have betrayed you, they have deceived me.

These traitorous public officials now declare that they were sincere when they made their pledges to the people, but that after they came into office they became acquainted with certain circumstances which caused them to change their minds.

I say that they secured their offices because of the promises they made to the people, and if they abandon the principles which secured them the offices, they should, in common honesty, abandon the offices which those opinions secured for them.

These officials were elected to perform certain definite acts, and if they are unwilling to perform those acts they should come before you, the citizens, and say: "Either relieve us of the obligation which we cannot honorably fulfill or relieve us of the office which we cannot honorably hold."

No honest man would retain an office obtained by fraud and perform an act accomplished through fraud.

These pledged public officials have no right to give up their principles without giving up their positions.

They have no right to change their minds. If you selected a man and pledged him to take a bundle of your money and deposit it in the bank, he would have no right to change his mind and deposit that money in his own pocket or in the pockets of greedy and unscrupulous friends.

We would not hesitate to call such a forsworn messenger a thief. What more polite name shall we choose for the faithless public officials who take $140,000,000 of the people's money and deposit it in the capacious pockets of their influential and unscrupulous financial friends?

The argument of the Money Trust, which is about to receive and profit by these tainted millions, is that the City of New York is so rich that it can afford to lose $100,000,000 or so.

I say that even if the City of New York can afford to sacrifice its money it cannot afford to sacrifice the integrity of its government, the honor of its public officials and the independence of its citizens.

There is more involved in this contest than money. There is involved the right of the people to rule, the privilege of the people to a republic to express their will and to have their will prevail.

If the will of the people can be persistently defied by the Money Trust and its creatures in office, we no longer have a republic, but an autocracy or oligarchy, which runs its business as a branch of the government and the government as a branch of its business.

This subway situation is not merely important because of the millions which are being filched from your pockets and the burdens which will be imposed upon your already overloaded shoulders.

It is chiefly important as a phase of the struggle between man and money, between the people and the predatory interests, which is going on from one end of this country to the other.

In that battle it is essential for the people of New York, as loyal American citizens, to perform their part courageously and credibly and to help achieve a triumph for popular liberties and fundamental American principles.

The money monopoly which you are fighting in New York the people are fighting in New England. It is the subway monopoly here; it is the New Haven Railway monopoly there. And everywhere that the monopoly is established there is the same extortion, the same oppression, the same indifference to the people's rights, the same defiance of the people's will.

Whenever you create a monopoly you create a tyrant, and wherever a tyrant is enthroned the people must expect not democracy, but tyranny.

It is not necessary that the tyrant should be a king. He may be a financial despot, and in this country he is a financial despot.

Tyranny exists wherever there is too great a concentration of power, and in this country that concentration of power exists in the hands of the magnates of money.

When this republic was founded its founders had had experience with the tyrannies of kings, and the fathers provided against such oppression by their laws and their institutions.

We have prevented the tyranny of kings and the oppression of despotic government, but we have not escaped tyranny, for we are suffering today from the cruel oppression of concentrated and corrupt wealth.

We must beat back that oppression with the courage and devotion which our fathers showed in their battle for their liberties and ours.

We must make laws and establish institutions which will protect us from this new tyranny.

We must restate our Declaration of Independence, revive our conviction in the rights of man, re-establish throughout the length and breadth of our republic the independence the opportunity, the equality before the law which are its life and its soul.

In this patriotic struggle he who fails is a deserter and he who falters is a coward. Sincerely,

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

H. H. D. PEIRCE IS ACCUSED OF SEAL FUR FRAUD

Herbert Henry Davis Peirce, of Cambridge, diplomat and former Third Assistant Secretary of State at Washington under Roosevelt, is accused of preparing and promoting a fraud at the Hague Tribunal and of other serious offences, in the report of the congressional committee, which probed the fur seal conditions at the Pribilof Islands, according to a dispatch from Washington today.

The charges were sensational and surprised Boston and Cambridge friends of the well known diplomat.

Mr. Peirce, who is a Harvard graduate and had charge of the arrangements for the famous Russo-Japanese peace conference at Portsmouth, N. H., eight years ago, is charged with having a hand in an alleged fraudulent claim which was heard before the Hague Tribunal last year, and which resulted in award of $50,000 against the Government of Russia. He is also accused of telling the tribunal that "a notorious British pirate" was an American citizen.

Says Russia Was Wronged.

The committee says that Russia was wronged and that Peirce is partly to blame. The Secretary of State is urged to take steps to see that the $50,000 is returned to the Russian authorities.

Mr. Peirce in an interview at Washington denies all the charges and declares he is "at a loss to know who is making the attack" on him.

The committee reported that the North American Commercial Company had violated the law by killing female seals and of the filing of a false affidavit by Isaac Liebes, president of the company, to the effect that neither he nor his associates were engaged in pelagic sealing or in any violation of the law.

Does Not Understand Attack.

A statement by Mr. Peirce follows:

I am at a loss to know who is making this attack on me or why. I remember that Representative Rothermel asked me to call on him late last summer in connection with this matter. He asked me how I was brought into the case and how long into my employment and compensation, which was authorized and fixed by the Secretary of State.

If the attack on me is intended for the purpose of embarrassment of Republican officials or ex-officials, the move is a strange one, for I am a Democrat. My first appointment to St. Petersburg came voluntarily from President Cleveland in 1894, and Mr. Roosevelt appointed me third assistant Secretary of State without my asking or knowing anything about it.

PART I.

"NICKEL first," said Fudge, holding out her hand.

"Do you think I won't give it to you?"

"Sperience say you won't. I know from 'sperience," replied Fudge.

Neither trusted the other, one had learned by experience and the other, old in crime, believed in no one.

"As soon as you tell me I will." Mrs. Bale held up the nickel.

"All right. Elizabeth Street Police Station."

"That's right. Now I'll keep the nickel, just because you wouldn't trust me."

"Turn it warm? Elizabeth Street Police Station, just because you wouldn't trust me."

"You're a young buzzy. Here—here's the money."

"No, I want a dime now."

"What for?" asked Mrs. Bale.

The independence of the waif whom she had ruled with a rod of iron was a mystery to her.

Fudge was on her mettle. The woman had tried to cheat her and she doubled the demand, because of the petty meanness of the attempt.

"Oh, Miss High and Haughty, then you shan't have nothing; do you know that?" replied Mrs. Bale, in anger.

"And you shan't have nothing," answered Fudge, grit to the backbone.

"What—ain't I givin' you your keep and your clothing for the little as you bring me?

What money have you earned today?" asked Mrs. Bale, fiercely.

Fudge was cornered. She had to explain that she had come home empty handed.

"Then git outside and try again—git out, I say! Too proud to beg! You'll have to steal if you want a night's lodging here."

Mrs. Bale caught the child and forced her toward the door. Fudge wept with fright and weakness.

"I can't go out again," she wailed. "My feet are sore and I am tired."

Mrs. Bale plucked the child's arms and cheeks, pulling her hair as an additional punishment.

"Tired! I'll make you tired. Take that, and that! But bruises is thrown away on you—it's blows you want, and blows you'll get."

Mrs. Bale picked up a leather belt to punish the child. The sight of the strap aroused Fudge with fury. As a worm, she turned. It was better to fall fighting than to stand years of misery. The waif snatched a knife from the table. Facing her tormentor, she cried:

"Don't touch me! I've stood enough; I'll stand no more. Don't touch me, now he's gone, for I feel the strength a devil here, strong enough to kill you."

Fudge stood her ground firmly.

"So you've the spirit of murder in you, if anybody ever did in this world."

Mrs. Bale shrank back in dismay. Seeing her advantage, the waif continued:

"Don't try to know what's in me. You remember Gommery's dog. He used to beat it and beat it until it turned on him one day and bit him; that's what I'm feeling now." Fudge edged toward the door.

Gommery a Threat

"Gommery shall know of this, and serve you as he served the dog. He cut its throat!" cried Mrs. Bale, who was glad to see her go. She had laid aside the strap and taken refuge in harmless threats. It was a drawn battle, which both knew would be renewed with Fudge or Gommery as the decisive victory.

PART II.

AS the years roll by we grow old, ailing in a narrow groove. Day follows day; each like the other. There comes a series of swift changes. The whole course of life is deflected. Old ideas are uprooted, old ways changed and old friends disappear. We face new conditions, new problems. We either rise or fall, but once more we settle in a rut. Fate way to settle the battle for Fudge in one of the strangest of turns of life.

As Fudge backed toward the door she heard footsteps. Mrs. Bale started at the sound. She feared it was a policeman after Gommery. She cried to Fudge to lock the door, but the waif threw it wide open.

General Brittlebank stood on the threshold.

"Why, it's him as gave me the gold pieces and had him took," cried Fudge with amazement and delight.

"Why, little one, is it you?" asked the General affectionately.

"Yes, sir, I'm her," she answered with a blush.

"Oh, dear, what's Gommery been and gone and done now?" wailed Mrs. Bale.

"Are you Mrs. Bale?" asked the General, brusquely.

Mrs. Bale Cornered

"Yes; christened Hannah, and I ain't for denying it," replied Mrs. Bale, abashed.

"Do you know that writing?"

"My husband's, Gommery," replied Mrs. Bale, glancing at the envelope.

"Read it, please," replied the General.

"Dear Hannah, I'm in—I, Ko—" she began.

"Read on," said the impatient General.

"It was prov—ING—ing—dence—providence," she continued. "He led me to FLUMP—flump his watch, for it's him as the dying woman meant me to see! IRIM — Irim — BRUTEE — BUNK — Bunk Brattlebunk! An aunt you, sir?" asked Mrs. Bale, looking at the General.

"Read on!" He motioned her to continue the letter.

"Show him the letters," she said, "in the box under the bed, and if the child ain't in it—what's he been up to now?" Mrs. Gommery said, interrupting the letter. "You'll have seen the box, sir? G. O. N. Gon—what does that mean? E R Y—Gommery. Dat's 'm!"

"Have you those letters?" asked the General with impatience.

"Of course I have," replied Mrs. Bale rather grossly.

"Then bring them to me," he said.

"This minute—oh, lawks! My Gommery said there was a 'folin' in her."

She looked at Fudge as though she was some strange creature.

So we all look at a friend who has done something remarkable or achieved distinction in the world, and forget that he had been a victim of her temper, and now she blossomed out as an heiress. She had fallen from her throne and Fudge, the drudge, now reigned over her by right of birth and money. Peering over her shoulder at Fudge she started to the bedroom to get the letters. At the door she paused, gave Fudge one long look, threw up her hands and disappeared.

Fudge Doesn't Understand

Fudge stood to one side, looking fearfully at the General. She could not comprehend all of the talk about the letters. The General gazed at her with interest, for his child would be the same age. He asked her if she was afraid of him, and why she stood away from him.

"No, sir, there ain't no cause to be afraid of you."

"Is this your home?" asked the General, leading her on.

"Yes, it's here I live," replied the child, smiling wanly.

"You told me you were an orphan, but the man who stole property called you his daughter—said you were mad—wrong in the head," said he, looking at her sharply.

"No, I ain't sir—and I know Mr. Gerson when I see him or well as I know you, sir."

"Gerson! Where have you seen him before?"

His interest was aroused. He recalled the strange actions of Mr. Gerson.

"Why, he stayed here once with Mr. Wentworth, and was very poor," exclaimed Fudge.

"Where is Mr. Wentworth now?" asked the General.

"Don't know, sir, for he can't be found —he's gone away."

Tears brimmed to Fudge's eyes as she recalled her sorrows.

"Are you sure of that—what proof have you that the man you call Mr. Gerson also stayed here with him?" asked the General eagerly.

"Eh, what—I know this picture which he gave the master when he went to gether."

Fudge went to a drawer in a table and got out a picture which she handed to the General.

"Why, this is Mr. Wentworth's face—the gentleman you saw in the hotel," exclaimed the General with amazement.

Fudge shook her head vigorously.

"No, sir, that ain't Mr. Wentworth—it's Richard Gerson's, it was him I saw and Gommery knowed it—else why did he try to drive me off? See what's written on the back, for I couldn't make it out," she said, pointing to the inscription on the back.

"To Frank Wentworth, from his old college chum, Dick Gerson." Then it is Richard Gerson's name upon that card and not Frank Wentworth's," said the General.

"That's it, sir; honor bright, if it isn't."

Fudge's eyes sparkled with earnestness and hope. Here was help from an unexpected quarter. The General was her friend. She could trust him and find Frank. She took his hand in her eagerness. Patting her on the head, he said:

"You are right. Now I know the meaning of my Hilda's choice. He was her betrayer, this impostor. Then if he is Richard Gerson, where is Frank Wentworth?"

"He has been missing for three days," said Fudge, "and it's Mr. Gerson who has wronged him, I'm sure. Why was he there with the lady he loved—the face of the locket he showed me?"

"I see it all. Our lawyer friend have been deceived, hoodwinked, by a clever scoundrel, as cleverly as Hilda hoodwinked me.

"But we will find Frank Wentworth and prove that villain an impostor."

"You'll find him, sir—you'll find him!" cried Fudge, joyfully.

"If he's in the hand of the hiring," replied the General, fearing the worst.

Mrs. Bale returned with a bundle of letters at this moment.

"There's them, sir, all together and tied up, just as she left them," she explained, holding them up to the General, who seized them eagerly and glanced at the addresses with pailing cheeks and quickened breath.

"Mine—yes—my letters to her! He spoke the truth—at last I know her fate," he cried with a sob in his voice.

"As young and pretty a woman as you'd see in a day's march," said Mrs. Bale, inadvantingly.

"And the child—the child she left," said the General, piteously.

"Well, she ain't been reared exactly in a palace," she replied. Then she eyed Fudge apprehensively as to what might happen. With an effort she cried,

"Fudge, step forward here."

"Is she the child?" gasped the General, with both hands on his breast.

Fudge Meets Her Father

"Yes; that's whose child she is. And we've shown her all the loving kindness of a darter—me and Gommery—haven't we, dear?"

Fudge was silent. Mrs. Bale whispered to her to speak.

But neither threats nor rewards could have made Fudge break her silence at that moment.

"Loving kindness you have never known, poor child. No father's hand has guided them, no mother's care has stood over their eyes and hair and much the same face," said the General to the waif, holding out his arms for her. "Come to my arms!" he cried to Fudge.

For the first time in her life the waif was embraced and petted. The General went silently over the girl, who nestled her head on his shoulder.

"Can you tell me where they buried her—the mother of the girl?" he asked Mrs. Bale when he had recovered.

"In a pauper's grave, sir! The number of it and the place where it was took is among the papers in the box," she explained.

"In a pauper's grave!" repeated the shocked General.

"So you belong to some one after all. You've got a father, and a kind father, and he'll be asking me to let you go along with him, I 'spects, when you're the idol of my heart and the apple of my eye," said Mrs. Bale to Fudge.

"That will pay you for the care of her these many years gone by."

The General handed a purse to Mrs Bale, who seized it eagerly.

"Gold—real solid gold. Two hundred dollars at least! You're a gentleman, a gentleman."

The General signed to Fudge to get her wraps and go with him. Without a word the child obeyed. She put her hand in his and started for the door.

Mrs. Bale Tries Cajolery

"And ain't you got a parting word to me," whined Mrs. Bale. "Who's been a mother to you, or a kiss for Gommery, when I've been a mother to you? He always pretends fond of her and gave her all she asked—didn't we, darling—you, you?"

"It is true, daughter, they have been kind to you," said the General.

"True, sir—no!" replied Fudge, "I've never known a happy moment as I owed to them. Never heard a gentle word, never knew a loving look. Turned out, from morning till night, into a dirty, narrow court. Ah, how I longed for a mother's hand to lift me when I fell, to kiss me when I cried, to hear kind words as I had heard for others, spoken for myself. But I had no father and I had no mother! Other children often had no more, but their crust of bread was given them by their mother with a kiss."

"My poor girl! I thank the Giver of All Good for bringing us together!"

The General took the new found daughter left the tenement to enter a new life together.

For three long days Frank Wentworth had lain in the coiner's cellar. The chain was long enough to allow him a little freedom. He could sleep on the bench, and Hannah Bale, in the goodness of her heart, had provided him with a blanket and an old coat for a pillow. What other comforts he could get for the prisoner she had put in the cellar. Frank did not fear for his life from Gommery. He knew that the thief was holding him only until he could find a way to get him out of the country. He thought he was waiting to get together a gang of South street toughs, who would put him on some ship and send him to China. The confinement was telling upon Frank more than fear. As he sat, turned wearily on the bench he soliloquized.

Frank Soliloquizes

"Another day of torture, driven to madness, with a doubt and fear of what my fate may be. But for the charity of Hannah Bale I would have perished of starvation, have died like a rat in a hole. How long they will keep me on with out one living soul discovering my fate. That must be the coiner's cellar of which Fudge spoke, which the police failed to detect when the coiners were arrested. Poor child, will life ever be good enough to well not release me.

"I have offered that hag a fortune to loosen these iron bonds, but the dread of her husband has kept her back, and to think Gerson struck me down and deprived me inoxsible—Gerson, whom I loved as a brother, and who has now usurped my place. How fair I feel; how many hours since she last brought me food. Oh, Ruth, my lost love, is it from the dread of life must end?"

His thoughts were interrupted by the sound of Mrs. Bale's footsteps and the opening of the door.

"Hullo! Are you listening or asleep?" cried Mrs. Bale, in a low tone.

"I am listening," replied Frank, rising from the bench.

"I thought perhaps, as you were dead, as you aint screeched these many hours, dead and gone with?" replied Mrs. Bale, coming down the stairs slowly.

GETTING GRAY? USE SAGE TEA TO RESTORE NATURAL COLOR OF HAIR

Says Sage and Sulphur Darkens Hair Beautifully and Ends Dandruff.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair, says a well-known local pharmacist. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and even today this simple preparation has no equal. Millions of women and men too, who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive use only Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Nowadays we are not bothered with the task of gathering the sage leaves and the mussy mixing at home. Simply ask at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of the ready to use preparation, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," Customers like this best because no one can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it contains ingredients which take off dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. No, it isn't a dye or even like it. You just moisten a sponge or soft brush with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

New Photographs of Cardinal O'Connell

PICTURES, NEVER BEFORE PUBLISHED, SHOWING BOSTON'S PRELATE IN HIS ROBES OF OFFICE

PHOTOS COPYRIGHTED BY CHAMPLAIN AND FARRAR

The AMERICAN publishes today the latest photographs taken of Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston. The photographs were finished within forty-eight hours and are from the gallery of Champlain & Farrar. Both in pose and in naturalness of expression the pictures are admirable presentments of Boston's distinguished prelate. They show him in his household cassock of crimson and black as he sits among his books in his library or welcomes visitors on days of reception at his home.

The Cardinal is also shown in his full pontificals as he is attired when seated on the sanctuary throne in the Cathedral during the celebration of pontifical high mass.

WILSON WOULD RUSH TRUST AND MONEY BILLS

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 30.—It became known today that President-elect Wilson favors consideration of the currency reform and the trust problem as well as the tariff by the special session of Congress which will meet shortly after the inauguration.

Friends of the President-elect say that he considers these three questions so completely interwoven that he wishes to have them considered together if there is sufficient time at the disposal of the extraordinary session of Congress.

Representative Carter Glass of Virginia conferred with Mr. Wilson at the State House today over currency problems with the idea of framing bills which Mr. Glass will probably introduce in the House. Mr. Glass has decided views of currency reform which the President-elect holds to be very valuable. Rough drafts of bills have been prepared.

SAYS MEXICO WAS CIVILIZED EARLY

Rex Beach Writes Thrilling Story of Life in Alaska

Rex Beach, unexcelled as a portrayer of life in frozen Alaska, has outdone himself in his newest short story, "When the Mail Came In."

The picture of human emotion he draws on that momentous occasion is a masterpiece.

Five months is a wearying time, and silent suspense will sap the courage. If only one could bustle, worry, lull the long, unbearable nights, when the mind leaps and scurries out into the wilds of conjecture like sparks from a chimney—ah, it's then you roll in your bunk and your sigh is not from the snowshoe pals.

A half frozen man in an ice-clogged dory had brought us our last news, one October day, just before the river stopped, and now, after five months, the curtain parted again.

I saw McGill, the lawyer, in the line ahead of me and noted the grayness of his cheeks, the nervous way his lips worked and the futile, wandering, uselessness of his hands. Then I remembered. When his letter came the Fall before it said the wife was very low, that the crisis was near, and that they would write again in a few days. He had lived this endless time with Fear stalking at his shoulders. He had lain down with it nightly and risen with it grinning at him in the stove, cold dawn. The boys had told me how well he had fought it back week after week, but now, edging inch by inch toward the door behind which lay his message it got the best of him.

I wrung his hand and tried to say something.

"I want to run away," he quavered, "but I am afraid to."

When we got in at last we met men coming out, and in some faces we saw the marks of tragedy. Others smiled, and these put heart into us.

Old man Tomlinson had four little girls back in Idaho. He got two letters. One was a six months old tax receipt, the other a laundry bill. That meant three months more of silence.

And so he goes on to describe the strangely gripping melodramatic scene in that frozen North. His new story is a feature of the magazine given Free with next Sunday's AMERICAN.

DEMOCRATS SURE OF SENATE MAJORITY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—With the election of Willard Saulsbury as United States Senator from Delaware the Democratic strength in the next Senate swung from the precarious figure of forty-eight, or exactly one-half of the Senate, to the safer total of forty-nine, a majority of two. Contests still exist in the Legislatures of New Hampshire, West Virginia and Illinois, with a total of four Senators to be elected about whose political affiliations doubt now exists.

SAY CONNAUGHT HAS RESIGNED CANADIAN POST

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 30.—That the Duke of Connaught has tendered his resignation as Governor-General of Canada was a report current here today.

It was announced at the government house that the Duke and Duchess and their daughter, Princess Patricia, were going to England in the Spring, but the Duke's departure, it was said, officially was on "leave of absence."

The Duchess has been ordered to London for medical treatment, as she has suffered from ill health ever since she has been in Canada.

If the Duke gives up his office, he will probably be the last royal Governor-General of Canada.

BOSTON MAN LANDS TWO "SAIL" FISH

PALM BEACH, Fla., Jan. 30.—James Kennedy of Boston helped swell the total in the biggest day's catch of "sail" fish on record here. Mr. Kennedy caught two. The total catch was eleven.

ASKS POWER TO TAKE BEQUEST OF MRS. EDDY

The legislative Committee on Mercantile Affairs today gave a hearing on the petition of Archibald McLellan that the First Church of Christ Scientist, in Boston, be authorized to hold the property devised and bequeathed to it by the late Mary Baker G. Eddy, to be held and administered by its board of directors subject to the trusts created by the will. Former-Governor John L. Bates, appearing for the petitioners, explained that under the Massachusetts law churches are forbidden to accept gifts or devises, the income of which exceeds $2,000 a year. The New Hampshire Supreme Court and the Massachusetts Supreme Court have held the device of Mrs. Eddy was legal and valid, except as to the provision limiting the amount of trust funds a church can hold.

The directors of the church now seek to get legislative authority to take over and direct these trust funds. There was no opposition.

CHARGE BUILDING CONTRACT ROBBERY

That public boards of the State who are giving out building contracts are being robbed by contractors with whom they do business by the substitution of poor material was declared at a hearing before the legislative Committee on Municipal Finance today. The hearing was on a bill to provide that building contracts made by public boards shall be split up so as to allow [illegible] and ventilating work to be bid for separately.

"Pape's Diapepsin" Ends Indigestion, Gas, Sourness and Heartburn in Five Minutes.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember, the moment Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who can't get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

CORNELL TO REPLACE DARTMOUTH ON LIST OF HARVARD GAMES

The news that Harvard will drop Dartmouth on its football schedule next Fall proved a complete surprise to the many followers of the two colleges in this city. Dartmouth has been on the Harvard football schedule for an annual contest since 1888 and crowds upward to 40,000 have attended these games.

Dartmouth alumni are very strong in Boston, and all expressed deep regret when they learned that the Green had been dropped.

Cornell is slated to take the place of Dartmouth on the gridiron next Fall. Percy Haughton, the Harvard football coach, has coached the Cornell team for two years, and Graduate Manager Kent of Cornell has visited Cambridge recently and concluded arrangements for a game between his team and Harvard.

The football authorities at Harvard claim that the eleven's schedule last year was too hard and that the team must have an easier schedule next Fall. This is the reason, they say, why they have decided not to play Dartmouth.

The Dartmouth-Harvard game has always been considered one of the most important contests on Harvard's schedule and the struggle has usually been witnessed by close to 10,000 people. The news that Harvard will not play Dartmouth next Fall has aroused a tremendous amount of interest in sporting circles.

There are many who claim that the real reason why the Hanover eleven has been dropped from the crimson schedule is on account of some alleged rough playing which took place in the Harvard-Dartmouth game last year. It will be remembered that Captain Percy Wendell's championship eleven had a hard time winning by the score of 3 to 0. Dartmouth played a slashing game from start to finish and if it had not been for Charley Brickley, who kicked a goal from the field, the struggle would have ended with the score a tie.

After the game several of the Harvard football players and men prominent in Harvard's athletic councils claimed that Dartmouth players broke the rules and used unnecessary roughness. It was then rumored that the Harvard-Dartmouth game would not be played next Fall.

The Yale game this year will be played at Cambridge on November 22. The game with the Princeton Tigers will be played probably on November 8, while Harvard may battle Brown on November 15.

It is believed that Penn will be included on the Harvard schedule in place of Dartmouth. The Hiltonia have been week end gridiron rivals of the Crimson for years and should not cause Storer's team any more trouble than Penn.

The Harvard football committee will submit its schedule to the athletic committee for confirmation within a few days. The athletic council will probably pass the schedule as it now stands. Therefore there is but little chance of a Harvard-Dartmouth game this year.

The athletic leaders at Harvard wish it to be understood that Dartmouth has not been dropped from Harvard football schedule for good and that a game may be arranged next year.

J. W. Farley Makes Statement.

The following statements in reference to the football situation between Harvard and Dartmouth was made today by J. W. Farley, chairman of the football advisory committee:

The football committee concluded that there should be next year a schedule containing less hard games than were played during the past season. For this reason, and for this reason only, they felt it inadvisable that the Dartmouth game should be retained on the schedule for next year, although they deeply regret it, interrupting a long series of close contests with that university.

No matter was taken up with the Dartmouth representatives some time ago in an informal manner and Dartmouth was in this way fully informed in the attitude of the football committee in reference to next year's game.

Yesterday afternoon, at a meeting of the athletic committee, that decision was explained to the athletic committee and heir approval of a schedule made up without Dartmouth.

It was the intention of the Harvard authorities to communicate this matter today by letter to the Dartmouth representatives and leave any statement thereto to be made by Dartmouth.

Dartmouth Manager Unaware.

Graduate Manager McAllister of Dartmouth when seen today by a Boston AMERICAN representative stated that Dartmouth received no word whatever from Cambridge in regard to the dropping of Dartmouth from the Harvard football schedule. He stated that Harvard was communicated with but no reply had been received.

TED MEREDITH WINS BIG RACE, HALPIN SECOND

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada and Second in Big Race.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 30.—J. E. Ted Meredith, the scientific sprinter who created world's record at the Olympic games last Summer, won the "Suburban quarter" last night at the games of the Knights of St. Anthony at the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory in Brooklyn.

Meredith won the classic race in the fast time of 0:50 1-5. Halpin of the Boston A. A. had secured what seemed to be an unbeatable lead. The time of the winner, which was 50 3-5 seconds, set a new American indoor record for the quarter-mile. The former mark was 50 4-5 seconds, held by Harry L. Hillman.

Davenport Out of Race.

Five of the greatest quarter-milers in the country lined up for the event for $500 trophy race, and the running all the way was of a sensational nature. Meredith was favored with luck in the drawing for position, and secured the pole with Meyer in second place, Sheppard third, Rosenberger fourth and Halpin on the outside. Irv N. Davenport, the Chicago flier, did not appear, so that the conditions were favorable for the five starters.

When the gun flashed Meyer, of the Irish-American Club, went to the front with Halpin three yards behind. The runners were traveling so fast that it was almost impossible for any man to better his position in the first lap, but Halpin went to the front as the finish of the first circuit was reached, and at the start of the final lap had a lead of two yards on Rosenberger with Meredith in third place, Sheppard at this point was five yards to the bad.

The fast pace of the first 220 yards told on Halpin in the final dash to the tape, and when Meredith came on with a rush the Back Bay athlete had no sprint with which to hold off the Olympic champion. Meredith passed Halpin in the last fifty yards and won by a yard and a half with Sheppard two yards behind the Boston runner.

Sheppard started a 1 to 5 favorite, in spite of his defeat by Halpin last Saturday night and the fast trials, of Meredith. Rosenberger, winner for two years in the Suburban, was not considered as dangerous by the New Yorkers, the race being considered as a duel between Sheppard and Halpin. Had the Irish-American A. C. runner won the race the trophy would have become the property of Rosenberger, and much money was laid on the chances of Sheppard, but he was a big disappointment, as he did not get into his running until half the distance had been traveled, and his famous sprint was not sufficient to bring him up to the flying leaders.

Meredith Ran Great Race.

Meredith proved himself to be a resourceful, steady runner, used excellent judgment of pace, whereas Halpin allowed himself to be carried off his feet by the early pace set by Meyer, the 400-yard champion, who was evidently in the race for that purpose alone. The race was deadly fast and was free from many signs of foul work by the competitors. Rosenberger finished fourth, five yards back of Sheppard, and Meyer withdrew after going 300 yards, the pace being too fast for him.

BOSTON MARKSMEN WIN.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 30.—The Boston contingent of the indoor league of the United States Revolver Association won its matches in the seventeenth and eighteenth rounds, defeating the Warren Ohio team in the first shoot, and Dallas, Tex.

Many Games Arranged for Harvard Varsity and Freshmen Nines

At a meeting of the Harvard Athletic Committee, the schedules of both the varsity and freshman nines for the coming Spring were ratified.

The two baseball schedules announced are as follows, all games not otherwise stated to be played at Soldiers' Field:

VARSITY SCHEDULE.

HOLY CROSS RUNNERS MEET GEORGETOWN

Holy Cross and Georgetown University will run a relay race at the games of the Boston Athletic Association Saturday night, February 8, in Mechanics Hall. Chairman George B. Billings of the Back Bay club has completed arrangements so that the meet will offer better relay races than ever before.

FOSTER IS BEATEN.

Reginald C. Foster, the former Harvard track captain, made his debut as a squash racquet player in the members' Junior handicap squash racquet tournament at the Boston Athletic Association yesterday. His debut was not very successful, as he lost to W. A. Carl, 17—14, 15—12. Carl gave Foster five aces.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. G. MITCHELL

A DISPATCH from Waco, Texas, says "the water in which the St. Louis Browns will bathe during their training season there contains silica, sodium chloride, alumina, iron sesquioxide, calcium, potassium, sulphates, calcium carbonate, magnesia carbonate, sodium carbonate and bicarbonate."

In addition to these ingredients it will take at least a dash each of ginger and pepper to enable the Browns to finish out of the cellar division.

"Perhaps the trouble today is that the stars of baseball are so tremendously overpaid," says a writer in one of the "highbrow" weekly publications. "Many of the baseball world masters today who are receiving yearly stipends that would strike many a high president were lucky to get their beef and beans regularly before they broke into professional company and became part and parcel of the baseball pastime."

"Some of the boys who in a few years jumped from eight dollars and board a week to $3,000 beauties retained their senses and are today useful and respected citizens, with bank accounts and large business interests. Others, however, became absolutely unmanageable as the unusual flow of golden coin found into their pockets, and while many drank themselves to finish others became so useless that even though they were still young and should have been in their prime, the minors would see harbor them.

"It is time that the National Commission and the club owners got together and formulated rules to make the men behave before, after and during the playing season. If a man does anything to bring discredit upon himself, his club and the sport he should be fined heavily enough to bring him to his senses."

THERE socalled "highbrow" weeklies print a lot of stuff relating to baseball written by men that do not know what they are writing about. Baseball players are not too highly paid in proportion to the amounts they earn for their employers.

"They were lucky to get their beef and beans before they broke into professional company," says this writer. What has that to do with the question? Many a grand opera singer was lucky to get his macaroni before he broke into grand opera. More than one president of a railroad was lucky to get a plate of "ham and" during his early struggles in the railroad business. Many an artist whose pictures sell for thousands had to starve himself before he became famous. Caruso was a day laborer in Italy earning a few cents a day before someone discovered that he was a wonderful voice. Now he draws $2,700 a night, which is more than the average professional baseball player receives in a season.

I WOULD like to have the "highbrow" writer name the $10,000 baseball players who have drunk themselves to death or who became so unmanageable that "the minors would not harbor them."

There are thousands of professional baseball players in this country. As a class they are just as well behaved as any other class of men in the community. There is no need of the National Commission formulating any rules to make "men behave before, after and during the playing season."

Five writers for these "highbrow" weeklies should find out something of the true state of affairs in the baseball business before they attempt to write about them.

CHARLES H. EBBETS, president of the Brooklyn club, severely scored his former friend, Horace Fogel, the other night. It was at the annual banquet of the Delaware County League in Philadelphia. The toastmaster called upon each of the big league officials present to tell the young amateurs present what the possibilities of the game were.

All paid tribute to the youths of America who make the game what it is today; that is, all but Fogel. When called upon to speak, the former Phillie president not only seemed everybody attuned to professional baseball but went for Cousin Mack and said that when Silk O'Loughlin made the famous decision that many have claimed cost the Athletics a pennant Mack said harsher things about the umpire than he ever did.

Fogel was asked to stop, and Ebbets became so boiling with rage that he took the floor and asked the toastmaster to have Fogel silenced. There was pandemonium for a short time, but Fogel finally sat down and then Ebbets told every one present the real facts in the case. Connie Mack, ever in his diplomatic way nosed off on the troubled waters and asked the young men to remember that Fogel did not know anything about the American League anyway, and that he was not competent to judge of what went on in its affairs.

Fogel wanted to reply to each of the men who had answered him, but the toastmaster told him that the remarks were uncalled for, and then the former president left the room in a huff.

PILGRIMS SIGN HOGUE.

Secretary Herman Nickerson of the Boston National team announced today that he has received the signed contract of Ira B. Hogue, the pitcher secured from the Anderson Club of the Carolina Asseciation. Hogue was the iron man for his team last season, taking part in 54 games, winning fifteen and losing eighteen with the other game going a tie.

HODGSON'S WORK GIVES M'GILL'S TANK MEN WIN

George H. Hodgson, the wonderful short distance swimmer of McGill University of Montreal, was the whole show at the dual swimming meet between McGill and the Brookline Swimming Club at the Ocean Pier Baths, Revere, last night.

McGill University won the meet, thirty points to twenty-three, but the closeness of the score does not indicate how obviously McGill, or rather Hodgson, overshadowed the wearers of the spurred seahorse. The incomparable Hodgson, Canadian champion at the lesser distances, and the sensation of the Stockholm Olympic swimming events, started in four races, and he won all of them.

The Summary:

Plunge for Distance—Won by M. Tippett, B. S. C., distance, 62ft.; A. McCormick, B. S. C., second, distance, 59ft.; R. Stuart McGill, third, distance, 45ft. 6in.

Fancy Diving—Won by R. Church, B. S. C.; Jeanneatte, B. S. C., second; Draper, McGill, third.

50-Yard Dash—Won by Hodgson, McGill; Ingram, McGill, second; Rich, B. S. C., third. Time—30 2-5 Sec.

100-Yard Swim—Won by Hodgson, McGill; Jones, B. S. C., second; McGill, McGill, third. Time—1:18.

220-Yard Swim—Won by Hodgson, McGill; O'Hearn, B. S. C., second; McGill, McGill, third. Time—3:13.

Relay Race—Won by McGill (McGill, McKay, Hodgson, Hodgson); Brookline Swimming Club (O'Hearn, Holm, James, Rich), second. Time—2:23 2-5.

Total Points—McGill, 30; Brookline Swimming Club, 23.

OPEN EVENTS.

40-Yard Dash, Championship—Won by R. Dean, Mechanic Arts High School; Lee Hosley, Brookline H. S., second; H. Page, Belmont Technical School, third. Time—23 2-5 Sec.

100-Yard Swim, Open Handicap—Won by H. Mc-Vicar, Boston Gymnasium Association (Pitt); C. D. Page, Rindge Technical School (3s), second; W. McCarthy, Brookline Gymnasium Association (8s), third. Time—1m. 7 2-5s.

Relay Race, Harvard vs. Dartmouth—Won by Harvard (Westervelt, Newell, McDonald, Hitchcock); Dartmouth (Hosley, Hall, Bullitt, second. Time—2m. 27 4-5s.

MELLODY MEETS DE LUCCA IN 'GO' AT UNITY CLUB

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE will be an all star show staged at the Unity Club in Lawrence this evening. Four ten round bouts are scheduled to decide which are the cream of the crop of boxers.

Johnny Dee, of Lawrence, will clash with Frank Mellody, of Lowell, in the special contest of the evening. Mellody is a product of Lawrence, while Dee's principal claim will be a fight he had with Mellody, when the latter was a comparative novice. Dee is the North End boy who was the talk of the boxing world during the past year.

I RECEIVED a letter this morning from Jimmy Cribby, matchmaker of the Kennedy club of Lawrence, in which Cribby says that he is about to match his protege with Mellody and that Mellody is the logical opponent for Dee. I would like to talk Steve Kennedy out of Mellody, but I understand that Mellody likes the half welterweight purses and Steve cannot afford to put up the kind of money that Mellody will want. Besides, the Lawrence boy has defeated a man of Mellody's class and the Lawrence boy deserves a chance at the best of the 135 pounders.

Dee has been matched with Billy Kennedy, of Boston, a comparative newcomer, who has been showing up well in his recent bouts. Kennedy has been matched with Mellody once before, but the match was called off. Mellody was to have been a special bout at the Lawrence club show, but Kennedy was unable to make the weight.

A NEW boxing club will be opened in Salem on Lafayette street, and will be known as the Salem Recreation A. A. It will have 12 sections in the North end. There are some 300 members signed up for the club, and they now have the necessary organization to proceed. The opening date of the club will be announced later.

THE St. Patrick's A. A. of Roxbury will conduct a card of entertainment for the members' benefit tomorrow night. The club has signed many of the stars for the two hour show, which is scheduled to start at 8 o'clock. Tommy Dowd, of Boston, will clash with Jack Dennis, of Lowell, in the special contest of the evening. Dowd is a product of Lawrence, while Dennis is a product of Lowell. Both are well known in their respective cities, and a battle royal is looked for. Jimmy Dee, of Lawrence, will be in charge of the boxing bouts.

Reggie Was Never Meant for the Name of a Dog — By G. Michelson

Married Life the Third Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

The Next Morning Helen Tries to Get the Restaurant's Recipe for the Cheese

A RESTAURANT at night, with its air of festivity in the lights and people passing in and out, is very different in the morning with its clingy, colorless gray desert all in sight.

And now as Helen paused at the entrance of the place they had dined the night before, she hesitated. She was not quite sure whether women ever went there alone, and no one seemed to be going in or out. To regain her composure she looked around the block.

They had dined there last night with the Dawsons, and Mr. Dawson had ordered a special pastry cheese shortly after it. It could be had at no other place in the city. It proved to be delicious. They were all enthusiastic about it, particularly Warren.

And now Helen's success was coming tonight. Having had a reputation of getting the recipe and making the cheese as a surprise. That same night she felt sure she had interested great deal in the matter. Warren had just been telling her of the delicious combination of cream cheese, peppers and onions, which had been prepared, but was very indefinite as to the proportions, and carefully refrained from giving the chief ingredients.

If she determined to make the cheese was forbidden. On the way home she stopped at the grocery and ordered cream cheese, sweet red peppers, and looking around to see if anything else suggested itself.

She noticed some tin-foiled packages of cream cheese. Why not try mixing that with the Bar-Le-Duc? Something that was used to make it less strong.

"Send these right up," she instructed. "I want to use them at once."

Half an hour later Helen was in the kitchen, unwrapping the packages that had just been delivered. Maggie looked on disapprovingly when Helen told her that she was going to make a new kind of cheese.

"Get me that yellow bowl and a spoon," demanded Helen, who

I think Mr. Schaeffers is around somewhere. I'll see if I can find him."

He disappeared through a swinging door at the back, and returned followed by a stout, florid German.

"We didn't see last night," she explained hurriedly, much embarrassed. "We had some cheese at Armand And I—I—when I realized the presumptuous of my request, I was afraid you would give me the recipe."

Mr. Schaeffer was plainly surprised. It was most unusual to have a charming young woman ingenuously demand a recipe of some dish they had the evening before.

"Why, you'll have to get that from the chef," he said finally, curiously. "He makes up all the dishes. I'd call him out if he was willing to give it, but you're welcome to it, so far as I'm concerned.

The Chef Refuses

The chef was sent for and appeared at his call to explain, with a good looking black mustache. But he had no interest in giving out a recipe, for now or ever, so Helen, English, were never vague. He explained the Roquefort, green peppers and onions, which had been apparent, but was very indefinite as to the proportions, and carefully refrained from giving the chief ingredient.

If her determination to make the cheese was forbidden. On the way home she stopped at the grocery and ordered cream cheese, sweet red peppers, and looking around to see if anything else suggested itself.

She noticed some tin-foiled packages of cream cheese. Why not try mixing that with the Bar-Le-Duc? Something that was used to make it less strong.

"Send these right up," she instructed. "I want to use them at once."

Half an hour later Helen was in the kitchen, unwrapping the packages that had just been delivered. Maggie looked on disapprovingly when Helen told her that she was going to make a new kind of cheese.

"Get me that yellow bowl and a spoon," demanded Helen, who was trimming the outside from the slice of Roquefort. She mashed this up in the bowl, added the package of cream cheese, a tablespoon of butter, rubbing it into a fine paste. Then she chopped together very fine two green peppers, one large Bermuda onion, and some celery and found in the ice box. Slowly she stirred this into the mixed cheese and tested it expectantly.

What Was Lacking

"Oh, it's delicious, Maggie! Try it," saying her a little on a spoon.

"That tastes right good, ma'am, certain," Maggie reluctantly.

But the color's lighter than that we had last night, and it is as sweet as Wings—Mrs. Rupetka, of course.

Maggie put down the paper and began to put on utensils.

"There," triumphantly, "that gives it the reddish cast. Now get that little stone jar and we'll put it in the ice box."

"Could better write out for me, please, before you forget it," suggested Maggie as Helen was leaving the kitchen.

"Oh I can remember and improve on it next time."

"I wouldn't try any improvement on that, ma'am," persisted Maggie, who had by this gotten out her recipe book and was turning to the blank pages in the back.

Helen took the blank kitchen pencil and wrote

One pound of Roquefort,
One package of cream cheese
One tablespoonful of butter,
Two green peppers,
One large Bermuda onion,
Half stalk of celery,
Rub the Roquefort, cream cheese and butter to a smooth paste. Add the finely chopped onion, peppers and celery. Mix well, season with paprika, and put in ice box to harden. Serve with hot toasted crackers.

There, I don't think anyone will know how it's made," she said to Maggie, looking over her shoulder (plagiarizing), isn't it?"

Helen had not intended telling Warren about the cheese, wanting it to be a complete surprise when it was brought on the table. But unable to suppress her enthusiasm as soon as he came, before he even sat his coat off, she rushed out with eager excitement.

"Oh, dear, I've made some cheese just like we had last night. I think it's the very same thing. Do come and try it."

Warren followed her into the kitchen, where she triumphantly took out the cheese and produced a spoon.

"Looks like a mess," observed Warren, peering into the jar.

"Why, no dear, it's the jar that makes it seem dark. Wait, let me take some out."

"Well, I'm willing to try anything that stuff now and spoil my dinner," as he pushed aside the extended spoonful and leaned in to dress.

He's put back the jar, adding she had not told him about it. Why could she not have waited until it was brought on the table?

The meal was quite promising and the dinner which was an exceptionally good one, passed without incident. Warren always raved Mr. Stevens, and by the time the salad was served he was in excellent humor.

"What Maggie brought on the cheese Helen said to Mrs. Stevens, was eating at it with much interest.

"Oh, what is that? It's perfectly delicious," she exclaimed enthusiastically, a moment later.

"Do you like it?" asked Helen, flushing with pleasure. "It's a new kind of cheese I tried today."

"I should say that WAS good! Did you say you made it?" asked Mr. Stevens, turning to Helen.

"Yes, we had dinner last night at that same place and we had a cheese something like it. We'd about as much as I thought I'd try to make some. Then Mrs. Warren [illegible] I think it was [illegible] she so delicious?

"Not only supposed Mrs. Stevens. Why it's perfectly wonderful. Do tell me how you make it?"

If she had but not she was not sure that [illegible] Warren and Helen exchanged the recipe on the back of an envelope.

"I can," declared Mr. Stevens, as he began [illegible] again. "I'm going to take that recipe down to Parker, the steward at the club. He makes some sort of a salted cheese, but it can't hold a candle to this. I've never had this anywhere.

"Well," declared Warren complacently appropriating, as usual, all credit, "since you want something really new, just come around here for dinner."

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"GEE, but it's cold out this morning!" exclaimed the Manicure Lady, as she bustled into the shop and flung off her furs. "I ain't saw it so big cold, or righteous, or whatever it is they call cold weather, since the year of the big wind, way back when I was a little girl of a girl."

"It is a little bit cool this morning," admitted the Head Barber, "but it's better for business than anybody would suppose. Warm weather is all right in the Summer, but when it comes in January, with rain storms that we have been having, things get kind of stale."

"That is just what Wilfred Peters said," said the Manicure Lady. "He is very good to see the cold weather come that he wrote a ode to the Storm King. I guess Wilfred is improving a whole lot on the verses that he makes up, or else I am getting kind of dotty in my more mature years, because I honestly thought these one were kind of good. This is them

"Storm King, Storm King,
Your art sure a born king.
Relaxing in the Winter fair,
Making coldness everywhere,
Gee, those frozen my two ears hurt.
Send it now its years old,
Storm King, Storm King,
Thou art very cold."

"Them lines ought to make good, saying in the middle of a big Summer, as the Head Barber said, but they don't make much just as good poetry, because they ain't good poetry. 'Storm King' and 'born king,' that ain't no rhyme, and you ought to know it."

"I guess if you would wait it I would," said the Manicure Lady, coolly. "You would have some license to criticize my brother's poems, though, goodness knows, George, I don't think you have got the mental grasp to see whatever there is to pick any flaws with anyhow."

"I am poetry. But if you have got any real high to listen, this is not the time nor place."

"Storm King, Storm King,
You're cause in the morn, king
You took the frost walk, people see
Ice on the top of a Christmas tree
If it is years I should have spent
It some more part of the Orient.
Knowing how cool and nice you are
I would have lived there from afar,
And just to be my humble slave
At any of worth I would have gave."

"It seems to get a little worse as it goes along," observed the Head Barber, "you never said any love for Wilfred, pet, anyway. Why don't that kid stop writing verse or, at least, why don't you stop reading them to me after he has people over? How much do you suppose I get for them lines in a magazine?"

"That's the funny part of it, George," said the Manicure Lady, "the poem was a regular one of our best magazines, but it wasn't good enough for it so that he could have paid me and he owes me to [illegible] money if he had wanted to."

"If a magazine took that poem and paid for it," scoffed the Head Barber, "I looks as if the regular poets is in for a long, cold Winter."

Almost Lost Foot

Saved by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Harry Jenkins, Elkhart, Ind., writes "I narrowly escaped losing my foot, because of swelling and sores on my ankle. They discharged a great quantity of matter and some pieces of bone. After three years of agony the doctor advised that the foot be amputated. My family would not consent to this, but began to give me Hood's Sarsaparilla. The Physician Calls and Is Pleased with the Way Beatrice Acted BEATRICE MINOR had finished her nap and had just seated herself at the luncheon table when she heard Maynard's car returning. She sat still and listened until it rushed up to the front steps, and while Jack "does the different" from that he'd sold to herself proudly under the driver goodbye. "It's been the great st fun!" she heard the child exclaim. And it was a awful good of you to come for. It's the best time I've had since we came out to this place."

Maynard's pleased cough and his words were lost to the motor's ears.

"Well, it's been fun for me, too, Jack, he declared. "We fellows like it get away together once in awhile, don't we? Thank your mother for sparing you to me, and, Son, take good care of her and don't let her get ill again! Goodbye! Well good-together and a soon!"

The motor did not go to the used to speak to the man as a less keen woman might have done. She was often foolish, as perhaps was, but she never yielded to the impulse to seek out and scathe nakedness to any man whom she [illegible] to like.

Maynard might have been pleased at [illegible] to greet him once more today and so felt that he owed to follow him up to this was to cheapen herself in her eyes. Perhaps the fact that she did, pe[illegible] to this kind of thing was one reason that men sought her out so often.

Moreover in this case, she set with a new sense found herself longing to have a [illegible] with Paul. She was learning from experience not to let herself get [illegible] upon him. Men, she knew, are uncomfortable experience had taught her. And, therefore, they had not been all in vain.

Maynard's Influence

But in spite of her resolution to regard Paul Maynard as she would any other agreeable man as a pleasant companion and as a possible suitor whom she might, perhaps, eventually bring herself to accept—she found herself moved by him as she had not been moved by any other man since her husband's death. And she set herself rigidly to task not to betray this sentiment to anyone, and to overcome it if she could.

It was, however, with genuine interest that she listened to Jack's account of his motor trip.

"We went away up on top of some hills where we saw a big river," the little fellow said. "I told Mr. Maynard that it would [illegible] could see it, and he said perhaps you would see it some day. Perhaps he will take you there [illegible] of you'd like to." She had suggested [illegible] instead.

His mother laughed [illegible]. "Perhaps he will, dear," she agreed. "But now I want you to ask him, and more than you would like to ask him to [illegible] you anywhere."

"It seems as if grown people could ask things that boys couldn't," remarked Jack. "He's a awful nice man, and we'd have had heaps better [illegible] do the [illegible] Mr. Maynard to go. He was quite nice, too. I told Mr. Paul Maynard about that."

"About what?" asked his mother with some trepidation [illegible] with a quaint [illegible] of [illegible] Maynard with regard to her possible matrimonial prospects.

"I didn't say anything you wouldn't like, mother," the child assured her quickly. "I only said that his brother was good to me when I hurt myself, but that I liked himself better than his brother."

"What did he say?" asked Beatrice curiously.

"He said he liked me, too," said the lad complacently. "And I guess he must, if he gives me such fine rides as that."

Her Son's News

"Now, son," suggested Beatrice, "suppose you stop talking for a few minutes and eat some luncheon."

Jack obeyed and there was a short silence, broken by the child as a new thought struck him.

"Oh!" he said, with a suddenness that made his mother start. "Dr. Haynes is in Pleasanton again! We met him—Mr. Maynard and me—this morning. So I guess he'll be up to see you today."

"Dr. Haynes here!" exclaimed Beatrice [illegible] "You must be mistaken, son. I know he was in Boston early last morning. Mrs. Reddan telephoned to me, there."

"I don't help that, boy here again, and he waved his hand to me," affirmed Jack. "After luncheon was over, the widow went into the cool house, for, for some reason, I don't know, at one end of the [illegible], and at the other end there was no [illegible] afternoon. Turn on the sun [illegible] that he light would fall across her [illegible] seated herself on a great chair [illegible] a novel that she had begun [illegible]. He absorbed did she become in it that she did not know a visitor had [illegible] until Mary opened the living room [illegible] announcement.

Dr. Haynes, please, ma'am."

She was startled to rise, but the pain [illegible] her.

"Tell him" he ordered. "I am glad to see that you are carrying out my instructions and resting quietly."

"I did not know you were in, Doctor," said Beatrice. "At least, but [illegible] my boy told me so while ago, and [illegible] I thought he must be mistaken."

"See was I here until this noon," [illegible] the doctor. "And it's all your fault that I'm here at all."

"My fault?" echoed Beatrice

The Pleased Physician

"Yes, because you are not to be trusted to take care of yourself. After I had given permission for you to get up this morning, I got to thinking the matter over and feared that you might be imprudent, and, do you know, I was so worried that I could not help running out to see. I stopped at the Cedar Cliff for a while, then came up here, and am going back to Boston as soon as I [illegible] As I now, tell me how you are feeling."

When Beatrice had replied to the most [illegible] question, the doctor re[illegible] "Well, you are not to order [illegible] you are a model patient. You've been a model patient, haven't you, Jack?"

"I've been a model [illegible] Jack declared [illegible] and the doctor and Beatrice [illegible] You [illegible] wondered, apparently, at their [illegible] about [illegible] Jack [illegible] to understand the joke. The doctor [illegible]

"Called in time and early by [illegible] may take your a drinking, but I'm glad that the mother [illegible] kept out of sight of all but a devoted woman friend and an equally devoted [illegible]."

Beatrice flushing more deeply than before, was [illegible] raised to rise, and the man attributing the [illegible] to the suggestion of [illegible] [illegible] speech, took her hand in both of his as he rose to say goodbye.

"Be assured, even if my visit to you was unnecessary from a professional standpoint," he murmured, "that I have been most repaid for the journey by this half hour with you. Will you try to believe it?"

The widow hesitated then laughed and withdrew her hand.

"I will try to," she replied with forced gayety. "All I can say is, I have wasted time enough on me for [illegible] nearly well. But I think I'll [illegible] goodbye!"

It was with a strange feeling of relief that she [illegible] saw the door close behind her visitor. She felt as if she wanted no [illegible] of any kind for a while yet.

Stock Prices; Financial News

There was an improvement in stock trading during the first hour. In New York prices crept upward, with American Can the spectacular performer of the list. In Boston there was little interest shown at the opening of the market. Most of the business was in American Sugar and American Telephone "rights." Coppers were sluggish, although warrant quotations were higher in London. It is understood, however, that metal selling is at a standstill.

European markets appear to have temporarily passed beyond any sphere of influence exercised by the Balkan situation. They are reported to be "cheerful." But new security issues in London are in small demand. The heaviness of Canadian Pacific there this morning was attributed to sales of "rights."

One report about Anaconda earnings for 1912 is that they range from $17,500,000 to $18,000,000.

At a special meeting of American Telephone stockholders today it was voted to authorize the issue of 4½ per cent. twenty-year convertible bonds to the amount of $67,000,000.

Buying of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific in that market was based upon expectation that a definite statement in regard to the dissolution situation will soon be issued.

American Can Still a Feature.

American Can continued to be the feature of the New York market. Early trading interest was centred upon it. Traders discussed the rumor that a committee has taken action relating to settlement of rights in regard to accumulated dividends on preferred stock, which amounts to 34 per cent. Can opened 1½ higher and immediately increased this advance to 2 points. The preferred was up ¾. Liggett and Meyers began at 222 for a gain of 1 point and within half an hour was 2¾ above Wednesday's closing.

While the undertone was steady the price list was irregular. Amalgamated was ⅛ lower at the beginning, but subsequently recovered and gained ½. Union Pacific opened unchanged, but on the second sale made a gain of ⅝. Among the other advances were Reading ⅛, Southern Pacific ⅜; Utah Copper ⅝; Norfolk & Western ¼ and Lehigh Valley ½. Canadian Pacific lost ⅛.

The Steel common opened unchanged and then advanced. Curb was firm.

Americans in London were above New York parity, but Canadian Pacific was off there.

The New York sub-treasury gained $1,622,000 from banks yesterday and since Friday gained $5,710,000.

Want a Pere Marquette Inquiry.

There is enough New England money invested in the Pere Marquette road to render very interesting in this section a dispatch from Lansing, Michigan, reading:

"A resolution was introduced in each house of the Legislature providing for a thorough inquiry into the affairs of the Pere Marquette Railroad. As the Democrats and Republicans fought with each other for the honor of introducing it, it undoubtedly will be adopted.

"It is framed almost exactly on the lines of the resolution in the New York Legislature which resulted in the big life insurance exposure.

"The proposed inquiry is aimed at the New York interests, headed by J. Pierpont Morgan, which threw the road into a receivership when the Railroad Commission refused permission to float another issue of bonds."

Copper Higher in London.

Copper metal opened higher in the London warrants market, spot being up 7s. 6d. and futures 5s. higher.

Speculative prices for the metal are not having any trade effect apparently, as one commentator on the situation says:

"At the moment there is no more buying of copper at that level than there was at 17¾ cents. The blame rests chiefly against European politics, for with continued uncertainty existing over the Balkan situation no more buying of big quantity can be looked for in the immediate future.

"Yesterday's demand was dull, with cables playing an unimportant part, as they rarely do, nowadays. Further evidence of good business last year came to light in the reported gross business of the Standard Underground Cable Company, totalling $17,000,000 for 1912. This company is one of the large consumers of copper.

"European consumption last year according to fresh compilation was 398,189 tons, a record, an increase over 1911 of 3.8 per cent., which in turn increased 12 per cent. over 1910."

Financial News in Brief.

Reading receipts increased $355,462 in December and the net earnings $218,323.

The Bank of England discount rate remained unchanged at 5 per cent. today. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is now 47.40 against 49.80 last week and compares with an advance from 47.40 to 48 per cent. in this week last year.

Concerning the recent activity of American Can it is said that Wall Street heard that the bull yesterday was due to intervention by Stock Exchange governors. When asked if any warning had been served, a member of the governing committee replied: "Not yet."

Some statisticians on U. S. Steel claim that after the corporation puts its new wage scale into effect there will be a deficit on the basis of 1912 earnings. They calculate that by the end of this year there will be a deficit of more than $8,000,000 after the payment of the common dividend at the present rate. Beginning Saturday the wage account will be increased around $1,000,000 a month.

The National Refining Company has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on its common stock, which is an increase of ¾ per cent.

Erie Railroad reports gross revenue of $4,951,821 for all lines for December, an increase of $425,858. Operating income $1,062,229, a decrease of $21,382; operating expenses and taxes, $3,889,581, an increase of $447,240.

Steel rail inquiries calling for 500,000 tons are now in the market and probably will be closed soon.

Chino Copper Company directors are expected to take action on an initial dividend at the regular quarterly meeting to be held on February 25.

ROBERT MANTELL WINS A TRIUMPH WITH 'RICHELIEU'

A critical audience manifested deep interest last night in the performance at the Shubert Theatre of "Richelieu" by Robert B. Mantell and his excellent company.

Old theatre-goers who witnessed the performance said they had never seen a finer "Richelieu" and that they had never seen this splendid actor in better form. There was a grace and finish to his performance that delighted the eye and ear.

Mr. Mantell's voice alone is worth going a long distance to hear. It is fitted in resonance and clarity for the declamations of last night's play. It rang clear and sweet as a bell.

Miss Florence Rockwell took the leading feminine role and showed her great ability in an emotional part.

This famous old play by Bulwer-Lytton is seldom seen on the stage nowadays, but it was one of the most familiar of productions to a previous generation. Booth, Barrett and other American tragedians often appeared in the character of Richelieu, and some of its speeches were once stock recitations. It is old-fashioned and stagy, but nothing in the modern drama is more replete with strong situations and human interest. It has a flowery dialogue but the speeches are virile in substance besides being catchy.

"The Merchant of Venice" was performed yesterday afternoon to the delight and edification of a large audience.

GARY TO DENY HE CRUSHED COMPETITION

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—A sweeping denial of the government's charge that the United States Steel Corporation crushed competition is to be made by E. H. Gary, James Farrell and other Steel Trust officers when they take the stand for the defence in May.

Judge Gary, who was accused by former President William Ellis Corey of intimate knowledge of the pools organized by the trust to regulate prices, intends, so the AMERICAN is informed, to go into an exhaustive history of the steel corporation from its inception.

He will reiterate his denial before the Stanley committee a year ago that any pool to regulate prices existed with his knowledge. He swore at that time that when he learned in 1905 that a steel rail pool had been formed he at once caused it to be broken up. Mr. Corey flatly contradicted this statement.

The fierce competition in the steel trade before 1901, when the steel corporation was organized, will be repeated by Mr. Gary, together with the facts leading up to the absorption of the Carnegie Steel Company. This acquisition Mr. Gary will maintain worked to the advantage of Carnegie, and did not injure competing firms.

A little later, Mr. Gary will declare, other firms showed eagerness to come into the corporation so as to get the benefit of concentrated finances and the consequent up-building of their plans. He will argue that prices in the steel trade were stimulated, rather than depressed, after the steel corporation was formed and that all steel companies made more money than they ever did before.

In an effort to support this contention the Steel Trust will use figures which show that the Steel Trust controlled only slightly more of the entire output of the country after the acquisition of competing firms than before the corporation was launched.

1,000 Newsboys Ready For Big Parade With Band, Arabs, Camels

One thousand Boston newsboys will march in the big parade with which the "Happy Twenty" of the Boston Senior Newsboys' Club will celebrate their first anniversary social Monday night. The procession, according to the arrangements of the committee, is going to be the most unique of its kind ever to pass through Boston streets. The newsies' band will make its first public appearance and other features will be a band of Arabs in desert costume, eight camels and plenty of red-fire.

The parade starts at 7 o'clock on Tremont gatreet, marches through Scollay square, down Hanover street and proceeds up Washington street to the Boston Theatre, where everybody in line will see "The Garden of Allah" as guests of the "Happy Twenty."

The receipts of the evening's entertainment will be used for the educational and social advancement of the newsboys. "Happy"—everybody knows who "Happy" is—will be the chief marshal of the parade. During the intermissions in the theatre the Newsboys' Band will furnish the music.

CONTINENTAL MEN AT ANNUAL DINNER

The ninth annual banquet of the Continental Clothing House employes was held last night at the Quincy House. Vice-President Albert Humphrey introduced President Frank J. Skelley as toastmaster. Addresses were made by Charles R. Talbot, treasurer of the Continental, Superintendent Harry A. Henderson and others. Solos were given by Thomas Shufelt, Edwin Peterson, Peter Gilooley and "Don" Keegan.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRIGON.

It is probable many private owners will enter cars in the 500-mile race at Indianapolis this year. Inquiries from many sources are coming into the office of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The rule reducing the piston displacement from 600 to 450 cubic inches has made it possible for more private owners to enter cars this year than heretofore. The latest inquiry along this line has been received from H. H. Woodworth of the Alma Manufacturing Company of Alma, Mich. This company is well known for its trucks and it has made a few pleasure cars, but it is the intention of Mr. Woodworth to enter a car as an individual.

He is building a six-cylinder car with a two-cycle engine and having 427 cubic inches piston displacement. He has been assured that the specifications of his car are quite within the limitations which govern the race this year.

Bob Burman, the "Speed King," has entered into negotiations with the Keeton Company, for a car which he hopes to drive in the race. Burman says he will drive the car providing the company allows him to enter the factory and superintend the construction and the assembling of his motor. He hopes to reach a speed of eighty miles an hour.

The first Little Six to be shipped to the Republic Motor Company will arrive in Boston tomorrow morning. It will be placed on exhibition in the show rooms in the Motor Mart. The Chevrolet Six, made by the same company, is now on its way and Manager W. C. Sills expects he will have it in his show rooms on Saturday. Both of these cars were shown at the New York show. Manager Sills says the Little Six is the lowest priced six-cylinder car on the market, and there is every indication that this car will be popular. He has been promised deliveries in February for the Chevrolet Six.

Manager E. A. Scheau of the Invader Oil Company announces that T. E. Tomlinson has joined forces with the Charles F. Kelsen Company, makers of the Invader oils. To Mr. Kelsen's existing organization will be joined Mr. Tomlinson's old selling forces, so long associated with him. Mr. Scheau will have charge of the New England branch in Boston and will push a strenuous campaign.

The executive committee of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers, in its monthly meeting in New York, is understood to have formally decided to recommend to its members that action be taken which will automatically terminate the guarantee covering the cars manufactured by the various members, providing tires are treated with any of the so-called "tire filers" now on the market.

The People Want the Telephone Investigation

The House of Representatives Has Shown Its Independence; Now Let the Senate Do Likewise

The Massachusetts House of Representatives, the other day, gave evidence that it was inclined to be an independent body by its decisive vote substituting the order for an investigation of telephone rates and charges in this Commonwealth for the adverse report of the Committee on Rules.

The telephone has become a necessity. In our present business organization it is as important as the nerves of the body, and, like the nerves of the body, it is the means of communication. Poor telephone service will hurt a community as much as poor nerves will hurt a man.

There is no one in the Metropolitan District who does not believe that the telephone service can be improved and that the telephone rates can be made more just. Let us have the investigation at once.

LET IT BE THOROUGH AND COMPLETE.

LET NOT THE SENATE BE ITS GRAVEYARD.

Major Sharpe of Ottawa Won't Hurt the United States Navy Much—

Probably Not More Than His Forbears Hurt That Navy in 1812, or His Other Forbears Hurt the American Army in 1776. TALK Doesn't Hurt.

Here is a letter from an anxious reader:

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—How about a good, strong editorial on the statement of Major Samuel Sharpe, of the House of Commons, at Ottawa, with reference to the United States Navy, namely, that it is made up mostly of foreigners and men who are morally and socially unfit for anything, and that we encourage deserters from other navies to enter our service. These statements are entirely wrong and should not be passed up without some comment by some of our leading newspapers or magazines. Very respectfully, A. W. H.

We don't think that any "good, strong editorial" is needed in this case, for the reason that, so far as we know, Major Samuel Sharpe does not require any particular "good, strong" treatment.

We never heard of him before, and hardly expect to hear of him again.

The important thing about the United States Navy is the work that it does, and we would rather at this moment have the opinion of the gentlemen in charge of Spanish vessels at Santiago than of Major Samuel Sharpe, "of the House of Commons at Ottawa."

If Major Sharpe has among his ancient grandfathers any of those that were interested in the English navy or army along in 1776, or 1812, and if one of those old gentlemen comes back to him in a pleasant dream and tells him facts, Major Sharpe would wake up with a different view of the possibilities of the United States Navy.

We do get some excellent men from other navies—and we are glad to have them. We treat them properly, and they are good workers.

We get the best workers from foreign lands because it takes courage and energy to leave and come across the water.

And we get some of the best workers from foreign navies—not deserters, but WORKERS, because it takes energy to get out of one rut, and come into a better navy.

Those that come into our navy have the satisfaction of knowing at least that if anything happens—THEY WILL BE ON THE WINNING SHIPS, and that is a good deal to know.

What Are You Doing About It?

The Years, Mistakes, Disappointments, Are All Behind You. Have Courage.

We talk today to those that are downcast especially. And by the downcast we do not mean the least successful from the world's point of view. Many called successful by the world know in their hearts that they are failures because they have fallen so far below their own standards.

"The heart knoweth its own bitterness." There is discouragement and hopelessness in the successful man's heart today as well as in the heart of the homeless man who looks with sad eyes at a dreary world and wishes it were over.

We cannot call back the lost hours. But we can firmly resolve to make better use of the hours that stretch ahead, of the days and the hours that are left.

A new, clean page is spread out before you. Upon it you can write what you will. Put the past out of your mind, if it disturbs you, and put the past mistakes out of your life.

You know what things you should give up and what you should strive for. Make up your own plan of life. Work at it. Stick to it. Above all, don't be discouraged. Do not let a big failure or a little failure cause you to sink down and give up.

Failure is the making of the right sort of man. Frederick the Great and Washington, whom he so much admired, won their greatness amid failure. With Washington it was one failure, one retreat after another. But he did not stop fighting, and so he won.

Young men, think of this. Somewhere, not so far from you, there is a man of your age. He lives out on a farm, perhaps, perhaps in a tenement, working by day and studying at night. His chance now is not as good as yours, even though you may consider your own opportunities small.

But when a few of these years shall have gone by the unknown of whom we speak will stand out among men as the most useful and brilliant of his age—and where will you stand?

If you had lived in Lincoln's day and had seen his big body stretched

Married Flirts—Men Have No Excuse for Such Action, for Their Attentions Can Bring Nothing Good to All Concerned

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

A QUESTION has arisen for animated discussion between a man and his wife:

The man contends that there is no proof of disloyalty on the part of a husband who admires the opposite sex to such an extent that he indulges in harmless flirtations with them, and even bestows a caress now and then.

He loves his wife no less for such little diversions.

The wife thinks no man could really love his wife who conducted himself in this manner.

She is confident she could not flirt with other men and indulge in familiarities and still care for her husband.

The husband, of course, argues that man's nature is different from that of woman, and what would be disloyal and undignified in her would be quite harmless on his part.

This is very old-fashioned reasoning and quite out of date. But, putting the merely marital question aside (of what is right or unright in the matter), another question must obtrude itself upon the mind of any man with common sense:

What Is a Man's Influence Upon Women He Flirts With?

What is his influence upon the women with whom he indulges in these passing flirtations?

Who are these women?

If a single woman or girl permits a married man to be familiar and to pay her attentions and to caress her, surely she must lose her standing among all decent people.

She cannot retain the respect of single men; for nothing so quickly tarnishes the reputation of a girl as to have her name linked with that of a married man.

It does not matter how innocent she may be of all wrongdoing; the world has a right to question her modesty, her good sense and her moral nature if she allows a married man to compromise her by his attentions.

She must lack good taste and a kind heart, for otherwise she would not do what is tactless and what will give pain to some other woman—the man's wife.

If the woman with whom this married Don Juan flirts is another man's wife, the situation is just so much worse, for then there are four people to be considered instead of three.

The wife who permits another man to tarnish her good name by his attentions lacks all the qualities which make up sweet, wholesome and noble womanhood.

There is always a time when she must know that the man is passing the boundary line between honest friendship and the attitude which leads to the co-respondent.

She must know, too, that a man who is paying her lover-like attentions is trying to test her good sense and her self-respect, or else he is a weak man, bent on amusement and distraction without thought of the consequences.

Therefore it seems difficult for the married man who has tried to convince his wife that his flirtations are harmless to bring forth one argument to substantiate his assertions.

There is still another type of woman he may be flirting with—that is the woman of the half-world, whose business it is to ensnare men.

But he would hardly argue with a good, pure wife that his attentions to such a woman were harmless.

All such masculine arguments are as empty as they are selfish. The married man who carries on flirtations with other women harms these women, harms his wife and harms himself.

There is nothing in it but weakness, self-indulgence, vanity and the folly that leads to every phase of crime.

The habit of sex conquest is like that of strong drink or the use of drugs. And of times is the result, or cause, of one of these habits.

Sex attraction is a powerful and beautiful emotion, given to men and women for the greatest and best uses.

The appetite for sustenance is a natural and proper feeling. It is quite right to partake of food and to sustain the body. But this does not mean that we should devour all the food on a hotel menu, or rob our neighbors' larders, and call it harmless amusement.

To Be Honest Husband or Wife Is a Great Thing

There are great and wonderful things in life to do and think about; and one of the greatest and most beautiful and most wonderful is to be a clean, wholesome and honest wife or husband; to keep the home the centre of happy, moral life; to protect it from every shadow of evil, and to control the impulses (which come to every human being at times) for indulging in weakness or folly by the will, which is like a rudder to the ship.

The married man who has been arguing with his wife is showing himself to be a very common type of selfish, weak man. Let him try being uncommon and living a life that will benefit the world and help all women who know him to respect him.

What Are You Doing About It?

at full length, studying simple books by the light of a wood fire, on the dirt floor of a cabin without windows, you would have said to yourself: "I will have no trouble keeping ahead of that man in the world." Perhaps you could have done so, had you worked as well and been as little spoiled by success.

So it is today. Could you see the Lincoln of the future you would say: "I can keep ahead of that young man easily enough."

Then do it—and you will be the great man.

But to do it, you must try. You must try every day. You must deny yourself—and do it automatically, because you are so much interested in success that you find no time for self indulgence.

One suggestion we should like to offer to all our readers—old and young, men, women and children. It is:

FEED YOUR MIND during the present year. Study, add every day something to your supply of knowledge. The day comes nearer and nearer when the world will be really civilized by the intelligence and knowledge of all the people. DO ALL THAT YOU CAN TO DEVELOP YOUR THINKING CAPACITY and your actual supply of information.

That advice we give TO WOMEN ESPECIALLY. For their sons must do the world's active work and they MUST SUPPLY THE SOU The able man is the direct product of his mother's intellect. Ev woman's ambition should be to give to this world good sons and dau ters and to give to them GOOD BRAINS.
